The Complete Word Study Old Testament

Bringing the Original Text to Life

The Complete Word Study Old Testament is the ultimate tool for the study of the original languages of the Old Testament. Each word in the Hebrew Old Testament is represented by a number (from Strong's Dictionary) and a grammatical code printed above the English text. The number corresponds to the original Hebrew or Aramaic word listed in Strong's "Dictionary of the Hebrew Bible", found in the back section of this book.

The Lexical Aids (Word Studies) section provides more detailed definitions of key words (also found in the back section of the book). The grammatical codes identify the forms and parts of speech of the Hebrew and Aramaic words and are explained in the Grammatical Notations section of the "Study Helps."

Also included in the "Study Helps" is a Translational Reference Index. The index makes it possible to identify, by Strong's Dictionary number, Daniel was a nobleman of Israel (possibly a prince) who was taken to Babylon in the first deportation (605 B.C.), probably while in his early teens (Dan. 1:3, 4). His ministry lasted the entire length of the Babylonian Exile, his last dated prophecy being made in 536 B.C. when Daniel was in his eighties. The meaning of Daniel's name, "my God is Judge," is certainly in harmony with the overall theme of the book, the sovereignty of God. This book describes current and future world conflicts in which God's control over all events is clearly demonstrated.

DANIEL

Daniel is probably the most highly organized book in Scripture. Some attribute this to the fact that near the end of his life, Daniel rewrote and organized the whole book into one consolidated message. The intricate arrangement of the ideas in the book demonstrates the extraordinary wisdom of Daniel (Dan. 1:17, 19, 20; 4:9; 5:11).

The things that appear in Daniel's visions, such as the great statue, the beasts, the angelic messengers, and the description of God's glory, are very similar to the things that are portrayed in the Book of Revelation. The Book of Revelation cannot be properly interpreted without a general knowledge of the Book of Daniel. Material from every chapter of Daniel is either quoted or alluded to in Revelation, and only two chapters in Revelation do not have some background in Daniel.

Dare to Stand

1 In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

2 And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God, which he carried into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god.

3 And the king spoke unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children in whom was no blemish, but well favored, and skillful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

6 Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah:

7 Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.

8 But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why all the Hebrew words that a particular English word represents in the King James Version of the Old Testament.

No single book can replace the insights you might gain by a formal study of Hebrew or Aramaic. But many do not have the time to spend the next several years studying these languages. The Complete Word Study Old Testament is the next best thing! Its easy-to-use format allows any reader to gain a deeper understanding of the Old Testament.

CODES TO THE GRAMMATICAL NOTATIONS

The grammatical codes, the small codes in the line above the text of this Old Testament, are listed alphabetically below. These codes represent the grammatical constructions found in the text of the Old Testament. (Some of the codes used in the Aramaic portions are not listed on this card, but can be found in the Aramaic Notations section of this book.) The number(s) in parentheses after each of the codes refer to the particular grammatical notations found in the Grammatical Notations, in the Study Helps section of this book, that will explain the grammatical construction. For example, the Qal Perfect, qpf, is explained by its own notation 100 (in bold type) with cross references to notations 2 (Active Voice), 70 (Perfect conjugation), and 92 (QAL Stem).

PREFACE

We at AMG Publishers are doing our best to make every word of the Bible understandable to the English reader by reference to the original manuscripts. The Complete Word Study Old Testament is one more result of the desire of our president, Dr. Spiros Zodhiates, to see this accomplished.

Our first effort was to provide the Hebrew Greek Key Study Bible, available in the King James Version or the New American Standard, thus making it possible for all to benefit by referring to the original Hebrew and Greek words. This Bible, however, contains only the explanations of certain key words, with grammatical codes being used only in the New Testament.

The second step was to provide The Complete Word Study New Testament in the King James Version. This work gives every word in the New Testament a grammatical code which explains its structure as it is used in the Greek text. In addition, a number over each word identifies it according to the numbering system of James Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible. This New Testament also contains a Greek concordance and has a section indicating all the Greek words which an English word represents in translation. Word studies expound upon key words, and footnotes explain key passages.

With that basic word and grammar identification, the next step was the creation of a companion volume, a lexicon of the Greek New Testament. The Complete Word Study Dictionary: New Testament is a complete dictionary of every word in the Greek New Testament. In addition to a complete definition for each word, the dictionary includes a discussion of the theological importance of some words, as well as derivatives, synonyms, and antonyms of words when such exist.

We now present the ultimate tool for the study of the Old Testament. Each word in the Hebrew Old Testament is represented by a number and a grammatical code that are printed above the English text. The number corresponds to the original Hebrew word in Strong's Dictionary of the Hebrew Bible and the Lexical Aids (both of which appear in the Study Helps section at the back). The grammatical codes identify the forms and parts of speech of the Hebrew and Aramaic words and are explained in the Grammatical Notations section of the Study Helps.

Included in the Study Helps is a Translational Reference Index. This index makes it possible to find, by Strong's number, all the Hebrew words that a particular English word represents in the King James Version of the Old Testament.

Although we have labored to make this work free from error, we are not infallible. If you should find a mistake, please let us know.

EXPLANATION OF GENERAL FORMAT

PLACEMENT OF NOTATIONS AND NUMBERS

In most cases, grammatical notations associated with a word are placed directly before the Strong's number representing that word. However, certain grammatical particles are not assigned numbers in Strong's dictionary and therefore have only notations. The opposite also occurs, as is the case with eth (853, the sign of the object), which was not assigned a grammatical notation because it is not technically assigned a part of speech, is not translatable, and is the only word that serves the function. Notations and numbers are placed above the word they designate (whenever possible) or are placed as close as possible above the word(s) with which they are associated.

When two English words placed next to each other represent a single Hebrew word, the grammatical notation and number of that Hebrew word are placed above and between the two English words. (For procedures adopted when three or more adjacent English words are used to translate a single Hebrew word, see WORD CLUSTERS, below.)

When two or more Hebrew words are represented by a single English word, a virgule (slash) is used to separate the respective notations and numbers (e.g., "prison" [Gen. 39:20], which is coded cs,nn1004/df,nn5470).

On occasion, words which appear in the Hebrew text are not translated into English. Such words are depicted by having their corresponding notations and/or numbers placed in parentheses above the text in the position that the English translation best allows. If a word represented by a Strong's number is not translated, but some of the grammatically coded preformatives and/or sufformatives attached to it are, the notations for those preformatives and sufformatives will be placed before the parentheses that enclose the Strong's number of the word to which they are attached.

The less common stems of the Hebrew and Aramaic languages, some of which it can be debated are not separate stems at all, but are actually morphemic variants of the traditional stems, have not been given separate codes within the work. Instead, they have been coded with the codes of the stems from which they are derived, but with an asterisk added to the end of the code. Hence, a participle in the hithpalpel stem, which is derived from and has the same meaning as a participle in the hithpael stem, would have the code htpt*. Two less common stems, however, because they constitute compounded stems with separate meaning, have been coded separately. These are the hothpael and nithpael stems. (For a list of the irregular stems and how each is coded, see the "List of Irregular Verb Forms" in the Study Helps section of the book.)

Words in the original text that are neither Hebrew nor Aramaic, such as the Egyptian word 'avrēkh (86), have not been given grammatical codes.

WORD CLUSTERS are groups of three or more adjacent English words which are connected with each other. These have been set off by asterisks between each word in that cluster. Asterisks have been placed after the first word in the cluster, before the last word in the cluster, and between intervening words. Word clusters have been used in the following instances:

To demonstrate where three or more English words have been used to translate one Hebrew word (e.g., "be*gathered*together" [Gen. 1:9]).

To show where an English word(s) has been placed between two or more English words associated with a single Hebrew word (e.g., "carry*it*down" [Gen. 37:25]). If the intervening word possesses a grammatical notation and/or Strong's number, a virgule (slash) is used to separate the respective notations and numbers (e.g., "came*Joseph*near" [Gen. 33:7], which is coded nipf5066/nn3130).

To represent where one Hebrew word has assimilated into another to form one word; a virgule (slash) is again used to separate the respective notations and numbers (e.g., "out*of*Eden" [Gen. 2:10], which is coded pr4480/nn5731).

To render Hebrew idioms according to their English equivalents (e.g., "went*on*his*journey" [Gen. 29:1], which would literally be translated "lifted up his feet").

INTRODUCTIONS to each book of the Old Testament cover Bible history, archaeology, and customs that are important in understanding the significance of the book in relationship to the Bible as a whole.

FOOTNOTES explain the exegetical, theological, historical, and geographical significance of certain passages. A key (⚿) in the text informs the reader that there is a note at the bottom of the page that discusses that verse, and perhaps several of the verses that follow.

STUDY HELPS appear after the Book of Malachi. They include:

THE GRAMMATICAL CODES and their explanation. The letters over the English text of the Old Testament refer to the grammatical structure of the Hebrew or Aramaic word(s). These codes are also listed on the bookmark that accompanied this product.

THE ARAMAIC CODES and their explanation. These are special grammatical codes that are only used in the portions of the Old Testament that are written in Aramaic: Ezra 4:8—6:18; 7:12–26; Jer. 10:11; Dan. 2:4—7:28.

THE LIST OF IRREGULAR VERB FORMS gives the irregular Hebrew and Aramaic verb forms and shows how each was coded in the text.

GUIDE TO TRANSLITERATION of the Hebrew alphabet.

LEXICAL AIDS TO THE OLD TESTAMENT which provides additional material for selected words from the Hebrew Old Testament. They are indexed according to the numbering system found in James Strong's Dictionary of the Hebrew Bible located at the end of this book. A companion volume to this work, The Complete Word Study Dictionary: Old Testament, a lexicon of the Hebrew Old Testament in which every Hebrew word will be transliterated and identified by Strong's number, is currently being developed.

A TRANSLATIONAL REFERENCE INDEX of the Old Testament which lists almost every word of the King James Text of the Old Testament followed by the Strong's numbers for all the Hebrew and Aramaic words translated by that English word.

A SCRIPTURE INDEX which is designed to aid the reader in locating all the Scripture references found in the Introductions and Footnotes.

A HEBREW CONCORDANCE of the Old Testament which lists by Strong's number the occurrences of every word found in the Hebrew Old Testament will also be available as a separate volume.

HOW TO USE THE COMPLETE

LAMENTATIONS

Lamentations was originally part of the Book of Jeremiah. It was later isolated because it was read publicly at one of the feasts of Israel and was included in the Five Megilloth (or scrolls; see the introduction to the Book of Ruth). Lamentations is read each year at Tisha B'av, a fast commemorating the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem (2 Kgs. 25:8, 9) in both 586 B.C. and A.D. 70.

AN INTRODUCTION is given for each book.

The style and content leave no doubt that Jeremiah, the "weeping prophet," is the author. The book focuses on the destruction of Jerusalem as observed by an eyewitness (cf. Jer. 37—39). Jeremiah alternates between horrible accounts of the destruction of the city to the confessions of the people's deep sins, and then to his appeals to God for mercy.

Each of the five chapters of the book is a separate poem of mourning. The first four are acrostics (each of the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used to begin each stanza of the poem). The acrostic is a literary device that makes the poem easier to remember and abstractly suggests that the author has covered his subject from beginning to end. It may also be that Jeremiah, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, made himself conform to this method to keep his grief from overwhelming him. Lamentations is a valuable commentary on sin and its consequences, and about the return to God for mercy (Lam. 3:22–24).

SUBJECT HEADINGS are provided throughout the text.

The Sorrows of Jerusalem

LETTERS above a word refer to the grammatical structure of the Hebrew word and are explained in the Grammatical Notations section.

1 How doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!

2 She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are on her cheeks: among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 Judah is gone*into*captivity because*of*affliction, and because*of*great servitude: she dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

NUMBERS above the words identify the corresponding Hebrew words in Strong's Hebrew dictionary, found at the end of the book. Words with boldface numbers are also found in the section of the book entitled "Lexical Aids to the Old Testament," where they are defined in detail.

ASTERISKS in the text indicate word clusters, which are discussed in the Explanation of General Format.

(K) 1:12 Some have compared this verse to Jesus' sorrow when he looked at Jerusalem and saw the impending destruction of the city, even as Jeremiah had seen in his day (Matt. 23:37–39; Luke 13:34, 35). Others suggest that this verse refers to Christ's agony on the cross of Calvary, as he cried for those who are separated from God as a result of sin. The true sorrow is seen in that it has been inflicted on Christ by God Himself (Luke 23:26–38).

Old Testament

GENESIS

The name "Genesis" comes from a Greek word meaning "beginning." This word was the title of the book in the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the Old Testament. The Hebrew name for Genesis is b^{e}rē'shīth, "in the beginning." The Hebrews often identified the books of the Old Testament by the first word of the text. In this way when a scroll was unrolled they were able to tell immediately which book it contained.

Aside from Genesis, there are no other writings that inform us of the major events which predated Moses. The first part of the book describes the key events in the early history of man. The remainder of the book records the history of the patriarchs.

Genesis was written in a prescientific age and was not meant to be a scientific document. Consequently, only divine inspiration can account for the perfect accuracy of its technical information. In Genesis, it is made clear that all things were designed and created by God and continue to operate within the boundaries of His purpose. Although the human race departed from God's original plan, God has lovingly provided a way for men to be reconciled to Him.

Though the Book of Genesis contains no express record as to who wrote the book, there are no compelling reasons for denying that Moses is the author, not only of Genesis, but of all five books of the Pentateuch. The unity of the Pentateuch is attested to in various portions of the Old Testament, as well as in portions of the New Testament. Even the opening phrase of the Book of Exodus, "Now these are the names," provides clear evidence to that unity. The Hebrew prefix that is translated "now" is the common form of the conjunction in Hebrew (most often translated "and" or "but") and indicates that there was some other book which preceded the Book of Exodus. Jesus refers to Moses as an author of Scripture in Luke 16:31; 24:44; and John 5:46, 47. And in John 7:23, the New Testament refers to circumcision as a part of the Law of Moses (see Gen. 17:12; Ex. 12:48; Lev. 12:3).

It has also been suggested that Moses made use of certain documents and oral traditions to write the book. Certain terms have been cited as proof of the previous authorship of certain portions. For instance, the term tōl^{e}dōth (pl. of tōl^{e}dāh [8435]), "generations," is said to be used to identify the author or the possessor of certain portions (Gen. 6:9; 11:27). The "looking over" or "familiarity with" other writings is not unheard of among the biblical writers, nor is it contrary to biblical inspiration (see Luke 1:1–4). However, it must be remembered that the actual writing of the Book of Genesis was done by Moses, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

The Book of Genesis is an appropriate introduction to the entire Bible. It provides answers for the universal questions of the origin of all living things, the universe, sin, and evil in the world. More than half of human history is covered in its fifty chapters. However, the Book of Genesis is not merely the introductory book of the Pentateuch, but rather the foundation of it, of the whole Old Testament, of the whole of the Scriptures. Without the Book of Genesis, what would be known of the creation of the universe, the fall of man, the judgment of God, or the promise of redemption? Since God is invisible, man may know of Him only through His works, which are seen in nature, revealed in Scripture, and accomplished in the life of the believer. And how deficient would our knowledge of God be without this book! Are not "His eternal power and Godhead" displayed in His creation (Ps. 19:1; Rom. 1:20)?

Yet the creation, in all that it portrays of the divine Creator, is not sufficient in its instruction to provide man with the knowledge necessary to attain salvation. At this point as well, however, the Book of Genesis lays the foundation of all the Scripture. For the book is not limited to the account of creation, but rather emphasizes the fact that the world was founded by God, that man was created in righteousness and true holiness, but that man fell by his own disobedience, and therefore was cursed by God. Furthermore, the first promise of a Redeemer, by whom the curse of death would be vanquished, is found in this book (Gen. 3:15, 16). The remainder of the Book of Genesis is in fact the first chapter of the history of redemption, in which God chose the seed of Abraham to be the line of the Messiah and the heirs of the promise (Gen. 12:1–3; Matt. 1:17; Gal. 3:6–9, 29).

1:1 – 2:4 The chronology which one often finds in the marginal notes of many of the older Bibles, notably in the Authorized Version of King James, is not a part of the Bible itself by any means! Archbishop Usher arrived at the date of 4004 B.C. by using his calculations of the years in the patriarchal genealogies (Gen. 5; 11). A comparison of these genealogies with those in the Gospels will reveal that biblical genealogies are not necessarily complete by design nor were they given to allow us to calculate the span of time between various events in the early history of man. They present certain significant names and omit others. Therefore, they cannot be used to establish the date of creation. The earliest time from which we can calculate calendar years with approximate accuracy is the time of Abraham. The age which one prescribes for the earth is extremely dependant on one's view of creation.

There are five major theories on the interpretation of the six days of creation. The pictorial day theory claims that the six days mentioned in Genesis are the six days during which God revealed to Moses the events of creation. But the Bible relates the creation as clearly, simply, and historically as it does any other event. To interpret the text in this manner requires the abandonment of all exegetical principles.

The gap view claims that Genesis 1:1 describes an original creation which was followed by the fall of Satan and great judgment. Genesis 1:2 is then supposed to be a description of the re-creation or restoration that took place (see the note on Genesis 1:2). Exodus 20:11 teaches that all the universe, including the heavens and the earth (Gen. 1:1), was created in the six day period mentioned in the first chapter of Genesis.

The intermittent day view claims that the days mentioned are literal days, but that they are separated by long periods of time. However, unless all the creative activity is limited to the literal days, this view is in direct contradiction to Exodus 20:11.

The day-age theory claims that the word yōm (3117), which is the Hebrew word for "day," is used to refer to periods of indefinite length, not to literal days. While this is a viable meaning of the word (Lev. 14:2, 9, 10) it is not the common meaning, nor is the meaning of the word sufficient foundation for the theory.

The literal day theory accepts the clear meaning of the text: the universe was created in six literal days. The various attempts to join together the biblical account of creation and evolution are not supportable even by the various gap theories because the order of creation is in direct opposition to the views of modern science (e.g., the creation of trees before light). The phrase "evening and morning" indicates literal days (cf. Dan. 8:14 where the same phrase in the Hebrew is translated "day").

1:1 God of His own free will and by His absolute power called the universe into being, creating it out of nothing (see Ex. 20:11; Ps. 33:6, 9; 102:25; Is. 45:12; Jer. 10:12; John 1:3; Acts 14:15; 17:24; Rom. 4:17; Col. 1:15–17; Heb. 3:4; 11:3; Rev. 4:11). When one acknowledges the absolute power of God, he must accept His power to create and destroy as stated in the Scriptures. There are many concepts such as this in Scripture which the finite mind cannot completely grasp. The believer must accept those things by faith (Heb. 11:3).

1:2 The Old Scofield Bible maintains that the condition of the earth in verse two is the result of judgment, and therefore interprets the verb hāyāh (1961) as "became." However, the Hebrew construction of verse two is disjunctive, describing the result of the creation described in verse one. The phrase "without form and void" is often misunderstood because of this rendering. These words are found only in a few other places (Is. 34:11; 45:18; Jer. 4:23). They do not describe chaos, but rather emptiness. A better translation would be "unformed and unfilled." See the note on Genesis 1:1—2:4.

1:26, 27 Is God a singular entity (Deut. 6:4; 32:39; Is. 45:5, 6; John 17:3; 1 Cor. 8:6) or a plural entity (Gen. 3:22; 11:4; 18:1–3; Is. 6:8; 48:16; John 10:30, 34–38)? The Hebrew word for God is 'elōhīm (430), a plural noun. In Genesis 1:1 it is used in grammatical agreement with a singular verb bārā' (1254), "created." When plural pronouns are used, "Let us make man in our image after our likeness," does it denote a plural of number or the concept of excellence or majesty which may be indicated in such a way in Hebrew? Could God be speaking to the angels, the earth, or nature, thus denoting Himself in relation to one of these? Or is this a germinal hint of a distinction in the divine personality? One cannot be certain. Until Jesus came, the essential (internal) unity of the Godhead was not understood to a great extent, though it was intimated (Is. 48:16).

God is essentially Spirit (John 4:24). Therefore, man, who is similar to God, possesses an immortal spirit. Men resemble God in certain respects (Gen. 1:26) without being equal with Him (Is. 40:25). Man's likeness to God is what truly distinguishes him from the rest of creation. Man is a personal being with the power to think, feel, and decide. He has the ability to make moral choices and the capacity for spiritual growth or decline. In the beginning, man loved God and was a holy creature. The Fall changed this. Man's spirit was so altered by sin that he fled from God and now loves evil more than righteousness (John 3:19, 20). After Abraham's time, only those who lived uprightly before God were considered to be his offspring (see Matt. 3:7–10; 13:38; John 12:36; Acts 13:10; Col. 3:6). Man is no longer in the perfect state of innocence as he was at the time of his creation. Therefore, he does not have the same spiritual, God-like attributes and qualities of that original state. Jesus, the last Adam (1 Cor. 15:45), came to undo Satan's works (1 John 3:8) and to restore in man a spiritual likeness to God (2 Cor. 3:18; Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10)

2:4 It is well known that there seem to be two different accounts of creation in the first two chapters of Genesis, but this need not cause us to conclude that they are incompatible, as some have suggested. The two sections actually complement each other. Genesis 1:1—2:4a presents a wide-angle view of all seven days of creation and deals with the creation of man and woman as a single act. Then in 2:4b–24 the author focuses on the sixth day, giving details which were not mentioned in the overview in chapter one. The separate origins of man and woman are brought into sharp focus. Therefore, chapters one and two are not in chronological sequence, but Genesis 2:4b–24 presents in greater detail some of what Genesis 1:11, 12, 24–31 merely summarizes.

2:7 The term "soul" has been used in a variety of senses by different writers in the Bible. The Old Testament Hebrew word is nephesh (5315) which means "that which breathes." It corresponds to the Greek word psuché in the New Testament, which is usually translated "soul" or "life" (see the Lexical Aids section for a more complete definition). The term "living soul" does not refer to Adam's spirit as immortal, but simply to the fact that he was a living, physical being. The same term is used in Genesis 1:20, 21 with reference to flying and swimming creatures. It merely signifies that Adam became alive; it denies the possibility of theistic evolution (the soul being breathed into a living animal form). The immortality of the human spirit is taught, however, in Genesis 1:26, 27.

2:8, 9 Although there may have been other purposes for the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which are not mentioned in Scripture, it functioned as a test of obedience. Adam and Eve had to choose whether to obey God or break His commandment. There is conjecture as to what would have become of the tree and what other purpose it may have served if Adam and Eve had not fallen, but these views should be recognized as conjecture. When they actually ate the forbidden fruit, the consequences of their actions became self-evident. They found themselves in a different relationship to God because of sin. Access to the tree of life was based upon a proper relationship with God. The real questions which faced Adam and Eve are the same ones that face people today: Which path should be chosen? What kind of relationship does one want with God?

2:15–17 Man was always meant to work, but God intended for man to enjoy it. Work only became drudgery after the Fall (Gen. 3:17–19). Is it possible for anyone to live sinlessly as Adam did prior to the Fall? The Bible explicitly states that all human beings are sinners (Ps. 14:1–3; Rom. 3:9–23; 5:12–15), and cites the origin of their sin in Adam. Because of Adam's disobedience, all men are made sinners. But how is the sin of Adam imputed to the rest of mankind? Some people say that Adam's state of corruption and guilt is transmitted to his descendants. Others feel that Adam acted as the federal representative of the human race (Rom. 5:12–20; 10:5). The fact remains that all humans are now hopelessly lost and in need of a Savior. That is why Jesus came (Luke 19:10).

2:21–24 Monogamy for a lifetime was and is God's original plan. The Lord Jesus reemphasized this principle in Matthew 19:3–9.

2:25 There was no shame before sin entered into the world. Only after Adam and Eve sinned did they become self-conscious of their naked bodies (Gen. 3:7, 10, 21). God intends for intimate, sexual joys to be fulfilled only within the bonds of marriage, and there without shame (Heb. 13:4).

3:1–7 The idea that the fruit mentioned in this passage was an apple could have come from the similarity of the Latin words malam (apple) and malum (evil). Whatever the fruit was, eating it was a clear violation of the divine prohibition. The seriousness of the offense lies in Adam and Eve's deliberate, willful rejection of God's explicit command.

Satan's temptation of Eve begins by planting the seed of doubt, "Yea, hath God said . . . ?" Notice how Satan negatively restates the prohibition that God made in Genesis 2:16, 17. And Eve belies her desire for the fruit and her hatred of God's command by adding the phrase "neither shall ye touch it" to God's prohibition.

Satan did not attempt to explain why "Ye shall not surely die;" he merely said it! He said it so convincingly that Eve believed it. Then the serpent went on to slander God's motives, claiming that God was keeping something from them. Once Eve "accepted" these assumptions, her desire for the fruit grew until she took of the tree and ate.

3:8 God is omnipresent (2 Chr. 16:9; Ps. 34:15; 139:7–10; Jer. 23:23, 24; Amos 9:2, 3; Zech. 4:10). In this instance the presence of God from which Adam and Eve fled was the visible and special manifestation to them at that time. These manifestations are called "theophanies," appearances of God in human form. They are instances where God appeared in the form of man to relate to human weaknesses so that He might communicate with man in a more personal way. However, God is not a man, and He does not look like man or think like man (Is. 55:8, 9). But God is a personal being who seeks to fellowship with man, like a loving father.

3:20 The name "Eve" (Hebrew chawwāh, [2332]) means "life." The fact that "Eve" is a Hebrew name does not mean that Hebrew was the original language. As thoughts were conveyed from one language to another, proper nouns were adjusted to carry their original meaning.

4:1, 2 The Hebrew word yāda' (3045) indicates the most intimate relationship between a man and a woman, the sexual bond. Its basic meaning is "to know," but it could be translated "and Adam experienced Eve." Cain and Abel may have been twins, since conception is mentioned only once.

4:3–7 Is God a respecter of persons (Ex. 2:25; Lev. 26:9; 2 Kgs. 13:23; Ps. 138:6), or is He completely impartial (2 Chr. 19:7; Acts 10:34; Rom. 2:11; Gal. 2:6; Eph. 6:9; 1 Pet. 1:17)? In the first series of texts, the word "respect" is used in the sense of acknowledging or paying attention to something. In the second set of references, "respect" refers to granting special favors to someone because of some meritorious quality within that person. Although God, according to this second group of verses, is "no respecter of persons" (i.e., no one has a higher standing in God's eyes because of their position in life or of something they themselves have done), He does, according to His sovereign will, pay specific attention to certain individuals and situations.

In this particular passage, the fact that God accepted Abel's sacrifice and rejected Cain's was not based on the fact that Cain's sacrifice was bloodless. Many of the required Old Testament offerings were bloodless (as meal and meat offerings). The difference was in the hearts of the two men. Abel offered in faith (Heb. 11:4), while Cain did not. Thus, God was not showing special favor to Abel over Cain because of something inherent in their outward deeds, but refused Cain's offering because of his improper attitude. Only when they are offered in faith do the sacrifices and service of men please God (Is. 1:11–17; Eph. 6:5–7).

4:8 The Septuagint, the Samaritan Pentateuch, and the Syriac Version add the phrase, "Let us go out to the field," after the phrase "and Cain talked with Abel his brother."

4:13, 14 Cain's cry was one of remorse, not true repentance. He was overwhelmed by the severity of the sentence, but he was not sorry for his crime. There was no plea for pardon or expression of sorrow or regret. He was a selfish person who was about to be deprived of all material belongings and driven into the wilderness. Cain was afraid that some of the relatives of Abel would find him and kill him in revenge. Thus, it is logical to assume that the population of the world had already multiplied considerably since the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden.

4:17 The origin of Cain's wife has perplexed many people. Genesis does not answer the question directly, but Genesis 5:4 asserts that Adam had other sons and daughters besides the three sons whose names appear in the text. Given the longevity of people at that time, Cain could have married one of his own sisters or even a more distant relative.

4:23 This particular outburst of Lamech showed a proud and presumptuous self-confidence. This was the boast of a wicked man who was elated with the possession of arms which his son Tubal-cain had invented. He felt he could take a human life at will.

4:26 The phrase "men began to call on the name of the Lord" denotes that worship, consisting perhaps only of a mute adoration, already existed (Gen. 4:3, 4). This passage may refer to the first instance of regular, solemn, public worship of God. Men were beginning to address God formally in prayer and thanksgiving in the time of Enos.

5:1–32 In this chapter Moses gives a ten-person genealogy of the people of the pre-flood era, and in chapter eleven there is a similar listing of ten post-flood persons which ended with Terah, Abraham's father. In both lists, the longevity of these men is far beyond anything in our own day. Yet Moses, who himself lived to be 120 years of age (Deut. 34:7), intended that these figures be taken literally. This was a time when men were capable of procreation at 182 years of age (v. 28). Since it is impossible to accurately assess past conditions based upon existing conditions, these statements should be taken literally.

5:22, 24 The original Hebrew adds the definite article before "God" in both of these verses. Perhaps this is an indication that idolatry was emerging, but Enoch lived in accordance with the will of the true God. By so doing, he had recorded of him the testimony that he pleased God (Heb. 11:5). This verse puts forth one of the first hints in the Old Testament of belief in immortality. The bodies of both Enoch and Elijah (2 Kings 2:11) were doubtless transformed (see 1 Cor. 15:51, 52). They may have been given spiritual bodies similar to that of the resurrected Christ (Luke 24:38–43; John 20:19). Enoch is also the speaker of a prophecy (Jude 1:14, 15). The reference to him in the New Testament is said to have been a part of an apocryphal book containing various prophecies given by Enoch. It is more likely that Enoch merely spoke these words and the Lord preserved them through Jude.

Evil Rules Over Mankind

and they took them wives of all which they chose.

6:1–4 The identity of the "sons of God" is uncertain. Three main theories are advanced to identify the "sons of God" and the "daughters of men." The first theory is that the "sons of God" are fallen angels and the "daughters of men" are mortals. The wickedness for which they are condemned is the unlawful marriage between those who are supernatural and those who are mortal. This ancient viewpoint hinges in part on the assumption that Jude 1:6, 7 refer to these angels. The proponents of this view insist, perhaps with some Scriptural backing, that the term "sons of God" refers only to angels (Job 1:6–12). However, there is no precedent at this point from which this conclusion can be made. And if this sin is, at least to a large extent, the fault of the angels, why is man punished by the Flood? When the proponents of this theory are reminded of the fact that Christ, in Matthew 22:30, says that angels do not marry, they answer that He only said that they do not, not that they could not or did not. Besides the mythological quality which this viewpoint brings to the text, there is considerable theological difficulty with the existence of human beings who are, at least in part, not descended from Adam (Acts 17:26).

The second theory as to their identity is the one most often held to within conservative scholarship. The "sons of God" are reckoned to be the godly line of Seth while the "daughters of men" are of the line of Cain. Thus the sin with which they are charged is one which is common to the whole of Scripture, and especially to the Pentateuch: the intermarriage of the chosen people of God (the believers) with those who are unholy. How can these men be considered holy when the Bible states that only Noah was holy (Gen. 6:8, 9)? And why is the term "sons of God" not used with this meaning in any other place? Other people also question why only sons and not daughters are associated with the line of Seth.

The last theory is one that is gaining popularity among conservatives. Recent archaeological evidence has suggested that the phrase "sons of God" was sometimes used to describe kings (Ex. 21:6; 22:8; Ps. 82:6, 7). Therefore the "sons of God" are immoral human kings who used their power to take as many women and whatever women they chose. It must be noted that the Scripture never describes human rulers as deities. This theory rests upon the conjecture that the "giants" of verse four are the children of the union described in the preceding verses. The word "giant" comes from the Septuagint rendering of the Hebrew Nephilim (5303), "the fallen ones," which comes from nāphal (5307), "to fall." It is often associated with violence, and so translated "overthrow, fall upon." The term emphasizes their violence and lack of respect for others. However, neither the text nor the fact that they were "giants" supports the idea that they are the result of a union between angels and human beings. No one believes that because the children of Anak, Goliath and his brothers, were giants that they were necessarily the offspring of some supernatural union.

6:6 This verse has puzzled students of the Bible for many years. The phrase "it repented the LORD" does not mean that God changed (Num. 23:19; 1 Sam. 15:29; Mal. 3:6; James 1:17), or that He is affected by sorrow or other feelings which are common to humanity. However, it was necessary for the inspired biblical writers to use terms which were comprehensible to the minds of human beings. A person cannot conceive of God except in human terms and concepts.

6:9 How could Noah be called "perfect" (blameless) when no one is perfect (1 Kgs. 8:46; Ps. 14:1–3; Prov. 20:9; Eccl. 7:20; Mark 10:18; Rom. 3:23; 1 John 1:8)? In both the Old and New Testaments, the words translated "perfect" refer to completeness and maturity rather than to sinlessness. Some have suggested that "perfect in his generations" (lit. "blameless in his time") refers to Noah's having an ancestry from the line of Seth, free from the mixing with the worldly line of Cain which ruined the rest of the race (see the note on Gen. 6:1–4). It is also possible that Noah is called "blameless" by comparison to the wicked mass of humanity. Noah is recorded in the list of the heroes of faith (Heb. 11:7) as one who stood alone for righteousness.

6:15 The dimensions of the ark present an interesting contrast when set beside the Sumerian account of the flood. In the longest and most famous of these accounts, the Akkadian Epic of Gilgamesh, the base of the ark was a perfect square, 200 feet long on each side. Such an ark would have hardly been seaworthy unless completely enclosed, in which case it would have spun around and around in the current of the flood waters. On the other hand, the relative dimensions of Noah's ark are not only seaworthy, but that of modern ships are very similar.

7:12 The number forty is not merely an arbitrary period nor a rounded figure of the period during which it rained. The number forty is used repeatedly in Scripture to signify periods of testing, sometimes of judgmental testing. Other prominent references involving the number forty are: Noah's waiting after the tops of the mountains appeared (Gen. 8:6); Moses' forty days on Mt. Sinai (Ex. 24:18; Deut. 19:9); the spies' forty days searching out Canaan (Num. 13:25); the forty years in the wilderness (Num. 14:33); the forty days Nineveh was given until judgment (Jon. 3:4); the forty days Jesus spent in the wilderness being tempted by Satan (Luke 4:1, 2).

8:21, 22 Contained in this promise is a stipulation that is easy to miss. Day, night, and the seasons will continue as seen in the phrase "while the earth remaineth." The earth was not intended by God to be eternal. Its final destruction is described in Psalm 102:26 (quoted in Heb. 1:11, 12). The most graphic account of the end of the world, indeed of the entire physical universe, is found in 2 Peter 3:10.

9:8–17 Throughout history God has dealt with man through covenants or agreements. Later, the Jews regarded this covenant between God and Noah as the basis of the relationship between God and all mankind, but the covenants with Abraham (chap. 15) and with Moses at Mount Sinai were seen as forming the basis of God's special relationship with Israel. Some believe that the stipulations laid on the Gentiles in Acts 15:20, 29 find validity here in the covenant between God and Noah. In spite of the fact that the distinction between clean and unclean animals existed (Gen. 7:2), God allowed the eating of any plant or animal. The only restriction was the eating of animal blood, for that is where the life of the animal resided (Gen. 9:4). Later, Israel was forbidden to eat not only blood but also the flesh of certain animals. The Lord removed the clean–unclean distinction from food altogether under the New Covenant (Mark 7:15; Acts 10:15; 1 Tim. 4:4, 5; Titus 1:15).

28 And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years.

9:20–27 The Hebrew word used here for "nakedness" ('erwāh [6172]) actually means "shameful nakedness" and is often used to describe immoral behavior. A different word ('ērōm [5903]) is used to describe simple nakedness or bareness.

The statement in verse twenty-two that Ham was the father of Canaan, and the fact that Noah's curse is directed against Canaan (v. 25), indicate that Canaan was somehow involved in immoral and indecent behavior with his drunken grandfather. Ham was indirectly to blame because he had allowed Canaan to grow up with this character and because he evidently did not treat Noah with respect when he found him.

The prophecy of Noah was to a large extent fulfilled when the Canaanites became "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for the Israelites (v. 25, cf. Josh. 9:23).

11:1–9 Josephus, the Jewish historian, places Babel in the days of Nimrod. Babel was a pointed rejection of God's instruction to "replenish the earth" (Gen. 9:1). It was a flagrant example of the corporate pride and willfulness of man. The intent of the tower may not have been to reach heaven; the expression can refer to a tower with an idolatrous "temple of heaven" on its top.

11:31 The statement that "Terah took Abram" is worded in that way because of Oriental propriety. Even though Abram was the practical leader of the family (Gen. 12:4, 5), his old and probably infirm father still occupied the place of honor. When Abram took this step, he was motivated by faith in the promise of God and did not even know his ultimate destination (Heb. 11:31; Gal. 3:6–9). The phrase "to go into the land of Canaan" in Gen. 11:31 is an infinitive of result, not of purpose.

God Calls Abram

12 Now the LORD had said unto Abram, Get*thee*out of*thy*country, and from*thy*kindred, and from*thy*father's*house, unto a land that I will show thee:

2 And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make*thy*name*great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee:
and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out*of*Haran.

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

6 And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there built he an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on*the*east of Bethel, and pitched his tent, having Bethel on*the*west, and Hai on*the*east: and there he built an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

12:1–3 This promise to Abraham is one of the most significant passages in the entire Bible. It points ultimately to the redemption of the whole world. Abraham's family became a divinely appointed channel through which blessing would come to all men. This promise was formalized in a covenant (Gen. 15:18–21), and was repeated four additional times: twice to Abraham (Gen. 17:6–8; 22:16–18); once to Isaac (Gen. 26:3, 4); and once to Jacob (Gen. 28:13, 14). Note the circumstances of the family in each case. This promise is emphasized in the New Testament in Acts 3:35, Romans 4:13, Galatians 3:8, 29, and Ephesians 2:12. Galatians calls it "the Gospel." Its importance to the Gentiles is stressed in Galatians as well as Ephesians where it is clearly stated that Gentiles who were "far off" and "strangers to the covenant of promise" have been brought to it by the blood of Christ.

18 And Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he 14:13 Abram (Abraham) was the first to be called a Hebrew (from the root 'āvar [5674], "to cross over"). Presumably, it was used in the sense of an immigrant. The name is seldom used of the Israelites in the Old Testament, except when the speaker is a foreigner, or when the Israelites speak of themselves to one of another nation.

14:18–20 Abram gave Melchizedek a tithe because, as priest of the most high God, Melchizedek was a representative of God. This brief encounter was the foundation of a messianic prophecy (Ps. 110:4, cf. Heb. 5:10; 6:10; 7:1–28). Melchizedek's identity has been hotly debated over the centuries. There are three main viewpoints: (1) Melchizedek was the preincarnate Christ. It has been contended that the titles "King of Peace" and "King of Righteousness" ascribed to Melchizedek (Heb. 7:2) rightfully belong only to Jesus Christ (cf. 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 2:14). Neither would it be improper for the Son of God to both bless Abram and receive tithes from him (Gen. 14:19, 20). Nevertheless, the language of Hebrews 7:3 undermines this position. The Greek word aphōmoiōménos, is a masculine present participle which means "making similar or alike." This implies that a comparison is being made between two persons. It would be strange to compare Melchizedek to the Son of God if he were the preincarnate Christ. (2) Melchizedek was the patriarch of Shem. The blessing given by Melchizedek to Abram in Genesis 14:19, 20 certainly has overtones of the blessing given by Noah to Shem in Genesis 9:26. Abram, the lesser, was blessed by Melchizedek, the better (Heb. 7:6, 7). Who would be greater than Shem, Abram's ancestor, the one who had received the promises? However, the identification of Melchizedek is described as being "without father, without mother, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life" (Heb. 7:3). Shem's parentage (Gen. 6:10; 10:1) and lifespan (Gen. 11:10, 11) are known. In addition, Shem's descendants are listed as inhabitants of the Mesopotamian and Arabian areas (Gen. 10:21–31). Shem be doing in Canaan, a land inhabited by Ham's posterity (Gen. 10:6, 15–20)? Why would Shem be mentioned by another name? (3) Melchizedek was a Canaanite priest–king. There would be nothing unusual about a Canaanite ruler meeting a victorious Abram in conjunction with the king of Sodom (Gen. 14:17, 18). In the light of the degrading nature of Canaanite religious practices, however, it would be unusual to find a Canaanite priest who worshiped the true God. In addition, Abram was known for building altars of worship (e.g. Gen. 12:7, 8; 13:18). Why would he not worship with Melchizedek, whom he acknowledged as being greater than himself?

The problem of Melchizedek's identity is a perplexing one. Each view has its strengths and weaknesses, so the question remains open to debate.

15:6 This verse is believed by some to be the key verse of the entire Old Testament. It is an important witness to the doctrine of justification by faith and to the doctrine of the unity of believers in both dispensations. Abraham's faith was accounted to him for righteousness before he was circumcised and more than four hundred years before the law was given to his descendants. Therefore, neither circumcision nor the law had a part in Abraham's righteousness. Paul proves that Abraham's faith was not merely a general confidence in God nor simple obedience to God's command, but that it was indeed faith in the promise of redemption through Christ (Rom. 3:21, 22; 4:18–25; Gal. 3:14).

15:13–16 God gave Abraham a preview of events in his family's future up to the point of their possession of the land which He had promised. They would first be temporary residents in a strange land for 400 years and become slaves. Their bondage in Egypt was certainly a part of God's overall plan. Four hundred years is a round figure. There is no conflict with the 430 years mentioned in Exodus 12:40, 41. The four generations of their sojourn should be understood as four lifetimes. One hundred years would have been a conservative estimate for one lifetime in patriarchal times.

15:16 The Amorite nation was one of the seven nations of Canaan and was governed by many independent kings (Josh. 5:1; 9:10). Originally they inhabited a mountain district in the south (Num. 13:29), but later they acquired an extensive tract of land from Moab, east of Jordan (Num. 21:26). They had many strong cities (Num. 32:17, 33). They were profane, wicked, and idolatrous (Josh. 24:15). They interfered with Israel at times (Num. 21:24), again were peaceful, but were finally brought into bondage by Solomon (1 Kgs. 9:20, 21).

16:15, 16 The Ishmaelites were the descendants of Ishmael and were divided into twelve tribes (Gen. 25:16). They were also called Hagarites, Hagarenes, and Arabians (1 Chr. 5:10; Ps. 83:6; Is. 13:20). They lived in tents and traveled around in large caravans (Gen. 37:25; Is. 13:20; Jer. 25:24). They were rich in cattle, but a great portion of their wealth may have been gained by lawless activity (1 Chr. 5:21; Jer. 3:2). After harassing Israel for a time, they were overcome by Gideon (Judg. 8:10–21). During the reign of the more powerful kings they became more peacefully inclined to the Israelites; they even sent presents to King Solomon and King Jehoshaphat (1 Kgs. 10:15; 2 Chr. 17:11). However, these peaceful inclinations did not endure for long, for some Midianite tribes fought against King Uzziah (2 Chr. 26:7).

17:5, 6 In Hebrew, the name Abram means "exalted father" (87), and the name Abraham means "father of a multitude" (85).

God at any time"? This theophany (an appearance of God to man) in the Old Testament is believed to have been Christ. The New Testament teaches that Christ existed co-eternally with God the Father (John 1:1; 8:56–58; 10:30; 17:5; Col. 1:15–17), and it is not inconceivable that He would at times take the appearance of humanity prior to His incarnation. For verily, Jesus Christ is the personal manifestation of God to man (John 14:9).

18:12 There are several different kinds of laughter in the Bible: (1) the laughter of incredulity (Gen. 17:17; 18:12); (2) the laughter of joyful wonder (Gen. 21:6); (3) the laughter of defiance (Job 5:22); (4) the laughter of approbation (Job 29:24); (5) hollow laughter with undertones of sorrow (Prov. 14:13); (6) the laughter of scorn (Ps. 2:4); (7) the laughter of rapturous delight (Ps. 126:2).

18:16–33 Abraham's intercession for Sodom, and in reality for Lot, was based on the principle in verse twenty-five, "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" He succeeded in postponing the judgment for the sake of a few righteous persons: 50, 45, 40, 30, 20, and finally only 10. But Lot had been an even poorer missionary than Abraham supposed, failing even to witness to his own family (Gen. 19:14, 26, 30–36); the ten righteous persons could not be found. Yet the Lord spared Lot and his family on Abraham's behalf (see the note on Gen. 19:26).

19:26 There was for centuries a peculiar formation of crumbling, crystalline rock that was associated by tradition with the story of Lot's wife. Josephus (Antiquities I.xi.4) declared that this pillar still remained in his day and that he had seen it. Clement of Rome, Irenaeus, and Benjamin of Tudela also wrote of this strange formation as visible in their day, but later writers stated that it had ceased to exist. Perhaps the existence of this pillar was used as an object lesson for the admonition of Christ to His disciples (Luke 17:32).

They possessed many great cities (Num. 21:28–30; 23:7; Is. 15:1), and were prosperous, arrogant, and idolatrous. They were mighty men of war (Is. 16:6). The Amorites deprived them of a large part of their territory (Num. 21:26). The Moabites refused to let Israel pass through their country and were so greatly impressed and alarmed by the multitude of the Israelite army that, along with Midian, they sent Balaam to curse it (Num. 22—24). Subsequently, Israel was enticed into idolatry and even intermarried with them. They were always hostile to Israel until King Saul subdued them (1 Sam. 14:47). Later they became tributary to David and succeeding Jewish kings (2 Sam. 8:2, 12; 2 Kgs. 3:4), but they finally joined Babylon against Judah (2 Kgs. 24:2). On several occasions, God pronounced judgments against Moab (Is. 15:1—16:14; Jer. 48:1–47; Amos 2:1–3).

19:38 The Ammonites were the children of Lot (Deut. 2:19). They were a cruel, covetous, proud, vindictive, and idolatrous nation (see Judg. 10:6; Ezek. 25:3, 6; Amos 1:13; Zeph. 2:10). Their chief city was Rabbah (2 Sam. 12:26, 27), from which they were governed by hereditary kings (Jer. 27:3). They had various encounters with Israel. With the Philistines they oppressed Israel for eighteen years (Judg. 10:7–9). King Saul succeeded against them (1 Sam. 11:11). David and Joab also overcame them (2 Sam. 10:7–14), but Solomon intermarried with their women and introduced their idols into Israel (1 Kgs. 11:1–5).

20:2–18 How does this section relate to Gen. 12:11–20? Similar events are not necessarily identical. For example, there were two American Presidents named Roosevelt who were in office within a few years of one another. Likewise, the cases of Pharaoh and Abimelech were distinctly different but similar circumstances. In the first instance, Pharaoh was quite taken with the beautiful sixty-five-year-old princess. Abimelech merely wanted a political alliance with a rich, nomadic chieftain. The text does not say that this ninety-year-old woman was beautiful to Abimelech. The case of Isaac in Genesis 26:6–11 is only similar in the use of Abimelech, a mere title of the kings of Gerar.

20:12 Abraham speaks of Sarah as his half-sister. The common Jewish tradition referred to by Josephus (Antiquities I.vi.6) and also by Jerome is that Sarah was identical with Iscah (see Gen. 11:29), daughter of Haran and sister of Lot, who is called Abraham's "brother" (Gen. 13:8).

22:1 Some versions translate Genesis 22:1 as God "tempting" Abraham. The Hebrew word in question is nāsāh (5254), which means to "put to the test." (See the Lexical Aids section for a more detailed definition.) God may allow us to be tested, but He will never place inducements before us to lead us into temptation which is more than we can bear (1 Cor. 10:13). Abraham proved faithful to the test for he believed that God would bring Isaac back to life to keep His promise even if Abraham had killed him (Heb. 11:17–19).

22:12 Since God is all-knowing, some question how He could say, "For now I know that you fear God." One cannot profitably discuss God's foreknowledge, because it is clearly a part of God's thoughts that are higher than man's (Is. 55:9). In one sense, this use of "know" may parallel the use suggested in the note on Genesis 4:1, God "experienced" Abraham's fear of Him. The test of Abraham's faith was a valid one, truly reflecting his absolute trust in God. Abraham was not imitating idolatrous neighbors who practiced child sacrifice (Lev. 18:21; Deut. 18:10). On the contrary, God commanded Abraham to sacrifice his son. Abraham did not have to give up his beloved son, but he was fully prepared to kill Isaac when God's angel suddenly intervened. God's provision of a substitute animal showed that He did not want human sacrifices. The only human sacrifice approved by God was that of His Son, the sinless Lamb of God (John 1:29).

23:2, 3, 19 The Hittites were descendants of Canaan's son, Heth, and one of the seven Canaanite nations. They dwelt in Hebron (Deut. 7:1; 1 Kgs. 10:29). Their land was promised to Israel and the Israelites were commanded to destroy them, but Israel did not destroy them entirely (Deut. 7:1, 2, 24; Judg. 3:5). Among their prominent leaders were Ephron, Ahimelech, and Uriah (Gen. 49:30; 1 Sam. 26:6; 2 Sam. 11:6, 21). Esau, Solomon, and many other Israelites intermarried with the Hittites. They were warlike people and made many conquests.

25:27 The strife between Rebekah's twin sons Jacob and Esau began even before their birth (vv. 22, 23) and continued not only throughout their lives but between their descendants. Much of the suffering of the Israelites (Jacob) came at the hands of the Edomites (Esau) as is noted throughout the Old Testament (Num. 20:20, 21; 2 Sam. 8:13, 14; Ps. 137:7; Joel 3:19).

27:1–38 There is often confusion about the difference between the birthright and the blessing in the narrative about Jacob and Esau. The birthright is related to the order of birth of sons. The firstborn son was given the title to the family name and a double portion of his father's inheritance. In this case Esau foolishly gave in to Jacob's extortion and sold his birthright to Jacob. Yet despite Jacob's wickedness and Esau's foolishness, the agreement over the birthright was binding. The regulation was later given that the father could not alter the birthright nor give it to another (Deut. 21:17).

None of this had anything to do with the blessing of Isaac upon Esau. As Esau himself recognized, a father could bless his son in any way he saw fit (Gen. 27:36). Therefore, when Jacob deceived his father and got Esau's blessing, he stole something from his brother to which he had no right.

Esau had already sold his birthright to Jacob. Jacob was now seeking to secure Isaac's final blessing as well, which would additionally constitute an acknowledgement of Jacob's possession of the birthright. Jacob realized that once the blessing had been given, it could not be withdrawn (27:33). In this act, Jacob revealed the true meaning of his name, "one who supplants." While God had previously recognized Jacob to be in the line of promise, He did not approve of Jacob's conduct. Jacob's scheming bore terrible fruits throughout his life. He was banished from home never to see his mother again, he was tricked by his uncle Laban repeatedly (chaps. 29–30), and he lived in fear of Esau for years (chap. 31). His dishonesty also affected his children, who not only dealt treacherously with the Shechemites (chap. 34), but also deceived their own father regarding the alleged death of his favorite son, Joseph (chap. 37). These results show not only God's disapproval, but also the bitter harvest that sin can bring in one's life. Jacob ultimately repented of his conduct and finished his years as a changed man (chap. 32). In spite of his weaknesses, God chose to confirm the blessing of Abraham to him (Gen. 28:12–15).

27:39, 40 The Edomites were the descendants of Esau. They inhabited a rich, fertile country which was given especially to them (Deut. 2:5). Their country was traversed by roads, though it was mountainous and rocky (Num. 20:17; Jer. 49:16). In character they are said to have been shrewd, proud and self-confident, strong, cruel, and idolatrous (Jer. 27:3; 49:7, 16, 19; Ezek. 25:12; 2 Chr. 25:14, 20). They inhabited the cities of Avith, Pau, Bozrah, and Teman and were implacable enemies of Israel. It was forbidden to hate them and they could be received into the congregation (Deut. 23:7, 8). King Saul made war against them and David conquered them (1 Sam. 14:47; 2 Sam. 8:14). They took refuge in Egypt and returned after David's death (1 Kgs. 11:17–22). They were again overthrown by Israel (2 Chr. 20:22, 23) but finally aided Babylon against Judah (Ps. 137:7; Obad. 1:11). God pronounced special judgment against Edom (Ezek. 35).

28 And the days of Isaac were a hundred and fourscore years.

35:23–26 This brief listing of Jacob's twelve sons and their mothers follows a longer account of the circumstances of their births. Although later there would be twelve tribes of Israel, Jacob's sons and the heads of those twelve tribes are not the same in every case. Ten of the sons, excluding Levi and Joseph, were the heads of tribes named for them. God later claimed the tribe of Levi as an exchange for the firstborn sons to which He had right because of the Passover in Egypt. Therefore, they had no portion of the inheritance of Israel. Joseph was Jacob's favorite son and was afforded the honor of having two tribes come from him. Jacob formally adopted his two grandsons, Ephraim and Manasseh, as his own sons. Through them Joseph received a double portion of his father's inheritance. With the double portion of Joseph there remained twelve tribes to share the inheritance which God promised to Israel.

37:1–11 Joseph was singled out by God from his conception. His very birth was an answer to his mother Rachel's prayers. His father's preferential treatment of him, his special coat being an emblem of this, caused his brothers to envy him and Joseph's prophetic dreams only intensified their feelings. Yet these dreams, and Joseph's ability to interpret them, were a sign of God's special blessing on Joseph. They would be the means of his advancement in Egypt and the preservation of God's people. Joseph's personal faith and obedience never wavered, whether he was in a prison or a palace. His clever suggestions to Pharaoh would provide a place for Jacob's family to grow into a nation. They would also usher in a time of prosperity for Egypt—God is willing to bless others so that His people may prosper.

41:42–49 Joseph was at the summit of political power. The ring and necklace were symbols of his office; riding in the second chariot suggests that Joseph was second in command over the whole kingdom. Joseph's service in the house of Potiphar and in the prison was divinely ordained preparation for directing the most populous nation in the ancient world. His scheme of gathering grain directly under Pharaoh's control (41:35, 48) undermined the power of the provincial nobles, and gives us reason to believe that he served under Pharaoh Sesostris III.

42:8 Why did Joseph's brothers not recognize him? To begin with, Joseph had been a teenager when he was sold into slavery. Almost twenty years had elapsed since that time. His brothers had never expected to see him again; as far as they were concerned, he was dead. In fact, both because of regret and because Jacob had most likely lamented over the loss of Joseph for all these years, his brothers had likely done all they could to forget Joseph. As an Egyptian leader, he would have been clean-shaven and well-dressed. And lastly, Joseph, whose voice was probably much different now, spoke to them through an interpreter. They would never have dreamed that it could be Joseph.

46:26, 27 The differences between this and other passages (Ex. 1:1–5; Acts 7:14) as to the number who migrated to Egypt are due to the point of reference and method of calculation, not to contradiction or error. Jacob's direct descendants in Canaan, his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, amounted to sixty-six persons (Gen. 46:8–26). The seventy souls of the house of Jacob mentioned in verse twenty-seven and in Exodus 1:5 adds to the sixty-six above Jacob himself, Joseph, and Joseph's two sons. In Acts 7:14 Stephen states that the number of Joseph's kindred who came to Egypt was seventy-five. Jacob, who is mentioned separately, and Joseph and his family who were already in Egypt, were not a part of this number. But remember that the sixty-six persons mentioned elsewhere included only the direct descendants of Jacob. The number mentioned in Acts also includes those who came with Jacob, but who were not his direct descendants; in other words, his son's wives. Since Judah's wives and Simeon's wives were dead, there were only nine of the wives who made the trip with Jacob. These nine, plus his sixty-six direct descendants made up the seventy-five persons who traveled with Jacob from Egypt.

46:34 Throughout its history, Egypt had a hatred for foreign things. Their very language depicts foreigners as a lower class of humans. In addition, the particular manners and customs of the Jews were totally disgusting to the Egyptians. The Jews had hair and beards, while the Egyptians, both men and women, shaved all their body hair off (41:14). This attitude of superiority is reflected in Pharaoh's instructions to basically "leave everything behind because we will give you good Egyptian stuff" (45:20). God had carefully chosen Egypt as the one place where Israel could grow into a nation. The Egyptian abhorrence for the Jews would limit the danger of intermingling, either racially or religiously (a problem which would lead to much trouble in Canaan). The size and prosperity of Egypt would allow the Hebrew people to become numerous while still being a minority in the country. The later invasion of the Hyksos, an eastern people, led to the enslavement of the Jews, which served to make them physically strong.

47:31 Did Jacob support himself on the head of his bed or did he support himself by his staff (Heb. 11:21)? The present Hebrew vocalization (mittāh [4296]) is translated as "bed," while the Septuagint and the Epistle to the Hebrews use a different vocalization (matteh [4294]), which is translated as "staff." Since the Hebrew vowels were not inserted into the Hebrew consonantal text until much later, one cannot be sure which vocalization is correct. However, the meaning and context of the passage are unaffected regardless of which is chosen. In addition, there is the possibility that the two passages may not be referring to the same incident.

EXODUS

Exodus is a Greek word which means "departure" and is derived from ek, "out of," and hodós, "road." The Hebrew title (the first words of the Hebrew text) means "and these are the names of."

The book of Exodus describes the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt, their journey to Mount Sinai, and the events that occurred during their sojourn there.

The patriarch Jacob had brought his family to Egypt to avoid starvation (see Gen. 46:1–27). When the Hyksos invaded Egypt in the early seventeenth century B.C. and gained political power, the descendants of Jacob were forced into slavery (Ex. 1:8, 10). Despite the bitterness of their bondage, Jacob's descendants grew from a family of seventy (see the note on Gen. 46:26, 27) into a nation of about two million (based on the figure of six hundred thousand men over twenty years of age, Ex. 12:37). The primary emphasis in Genesis was on the family of Abraham, but the Book of Exodus focuses on the developing nation of Israel.

The main theme of Exodus is redemption. The deliverance of the children of Israel from bondage in Egypt is a type of all redemption, and Moses who led them is a type of Christ.

1:1–5 See the note on Genesis 46:26, 27.

1:6 The word "generation" is used in a variety of ways in the Scriptures. In some cases it refers to an unspecified period of time (Ps. 102:24), while at other times it is used as a simple reference to the past (Is. 51:8) or the future (Ps. 100:5). It is also used to designate men who belonged to a certain class in society. In this verse it refers to all those in a particular class living at a designated time.

1:8 The expression "arose over Egypt" could better be translated "arose against Egypt." This probably refers to the invasion of the Hyksos, a people related to the Hebrews, who conquered Egypt. The Hyksos were never numerous, so the growing nation of Israel posed a threat to them (Ex. 1:9). This threat ultimately led the Hyksos rulers to enslave the Jews. When the Hyksos were later driven out, all of the hatred which the native Egyptians had for foreigners was focused on the Hebrews. Because the native Egyptians also feared they would become too numerous, they made the Israelite servitude more harsh (Ex. 1:13) and attempted to control the population by killing the male babies (see the note on Ex. 1:17–20).

1:17–20 God has instituted civil government for the good of all people (Rom. 13:1–5). Throughout Scripture, He instructs His people to be in submission to the powers of government (Eccl. 8:2; 1 Pet. 2:13, 14).

However, the governments were not granted the right to compel men to do things which are contrary to God's law (Dan. 3:16, 18; Acts 4:19; 5:29). The question arises here whether the midwives were blessed for lying and refusing obedience to the king. The fact was that God blessed the midwives, not for their lying, but for their obedience to God. See the note on Joshua 2:1.

2:10 It is likely that the name given him by the Egyptian princess was a compound of an Egyptian river-god's name (such as Hapi or Osiris) and the Egyptian word mos meaning "child" (i.e. Hapimos). To the Egyptian princess, drawing Moses out of the water meant that a river-god had given birth to him. Moses may have thereafter dropped the false god's name and used the Hebrew name Mōsheh (4872), "Moses," from the Hebrew word māshāh (4871), "to draw out." The text here could also mean that Moses' mother named him since the Hebrew does not specify which "she," Pharaoh's daughter or Moses' mother, actually named him.

2:15 The Midianites were descendants of Abraham by another wife, Keturah, whom he married after Sarah died (Gen. 25:1).

2:16, 21 In Numbers 12:1, Moses' wife is said to be an Ethiopian. Since Ethiopia was settled by descendants of Cush, they can be referred to as both. It can also be seen from Habakkuk 3:7 that "Cushan" and "Midian" are either interchangeable names or that Midian is the place where these people lived. Therefore, Zipporah was most likely the Ethiopian wife. Another possibility is that, at the point of Numbers 12:1, Moses' first wife Zipporah had died, and he married an Ethiopian woman (just as Abraham had married Keturah after the death of Sarah; see the note on Gen. 2:15–17).

2:22 In Hebrew the name "Gershom" suggests a foreigner who was banished into exile. Moses second son, Eliezer ("God is a Helper"), is mentioned in Exodus 18:4.

3:14 The phrase "I AM" in Hebrew appears to be closely related to God's personal name of Jehovah (Ex. 6:3; or Yahweh or YHWH) which occurs more than 6,000 times in the Old Testament. However, the abbreviated form of Yahweh is Yāh ([3050] Ps. 68:4; and in the word hallelujah). Hence, the meaning of Jehovah is not completely clear to biblical scholars, though it seems to suggest the timelessness of God, who is the very foundation of all existence. Perhaps there is a hint of this understanding of the name in Revelation 1:4 where it is said of Christ, "Him which is, and which was, and which is to come" (see also Heb. 13:8). Jesus probably alluded to this name of God in John 8:58, "Before Abraham was, I AM."

6:3 In light of such passages as Genesis 12:8 and 14:18, 22 in which LORD is equivalent to JEHOVAH in this verse, this name of God was evidently known among the patriarchs. Some scholars have suggested that Moses, because of his personal knowledge of the Lord at this time, inserted the name in the passages in Genesis when he wrote it at a later time. However, the key to this problem probably lies in a proper understanding of the Hebrew word yādhāh (3034), "known." One meaning of this word is "to know by instruction or experience." Israel was about to witness the events of their exodus from Egypt, a more graphic demonstration of God's power than their forefathers had ever seen. It was by this name, Jehovah, that God's powerful works of salvation would be done. Israel would know by experience the full meaning of His name. Though they knew He was called "LORD," the patriarchs had not seen such a demonstration of power. Therefore, they had not known all the implications of that name.

7:3 Compare this verse to Exodus 8:15, where Pharaoh is said to have hardened his own heart. Scripture indicates that the natural inclination of man is to oppose God (Rom. 3:9–23; 5:10). Furthermore, Romans 1:24 reveals that God, in certain cases, allows men to follow the evil desires of their own hearts. God may have simply allowed Pharaoh, in his pride and sinfulness, to do as he desired. This would account for God "hardening" his heart in that God could have softened Pharaoh's heart had He chosen to intervene.

12:35 It was customary at the parting of friends or departure of a servant to give a gift. The Israelites had long been servants of the Egyptians. Probably in a state of panic which followed these events, the Egyptians were willing to give them anything if they would leave and do so quickly. This is a fulfillment of Genesis 15:14.

This passage, not Psalm 34:20, is the reference that is fulfilled in John 19:36, where Jesus' legs were not broken. 14:30, 31 Moses had commanded Israel in verse thirteen to "stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." The confirmation is now made that on the day that God saved them, they saw His great work and believed. He had led them into a position in which they were not able to save themselves, and they could only depend upon Him for that salvation. The deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt is a central theme throughout the Old Testament. Throughout their history the descendants of these Israelites remembered the events of that day (2 Kgs. 17:7; 2 Chr. 6:4, 5). In times of apostasy, the Lord called upon Israel to remember that work of salvation (Jer. 11:3, 4; Hos. 12:13). The story of that deliverance went before them. Forty years later, as they marched forward to possess Canaan, their adversaries remembered the demonstration of the power of their God in their flight from Egypt (Josh. 2:10).

15:23–25 The Lord did not take Israel to Canaan by the most direct route. The people needed not only to observe the mighty works of His power, but also to depend upon Him in a practical way for the necessities of life. Ultimately, they needed to understand that all would be accomplished by God's own power and not by their own ability (cf. Deut. 8:2). At Marah they needed water, but that which was available was not fit for drinking until God acted. Thus, God was instructing them that even though they had been brought out of bondage and had witnessed the defeat of the Egyptian army, they must still depend on Him.

16:13–15 The events of this passage were another of the steps in building the faith of Israel. There were no resources in the Sinai wilderness to feed several million people, let alone their herds and flocks. God had provided water; He would now provide food. The provision of quail was miraculous—the birds were native to the region, but normally they could only be found in small and scattered numbers. God brought multitudes of quail, though the text does not tell how frequently this occurred. Manna differed in that it was God's daily provision from this time until Israel entered the promised land and was able to eat its crops (Josh. 5:12). Gathering the manna each day would increase Israel's dependence upon God. The amount gathered would be just sufficient (Ex. 16:18), confirming God's personal care. There is no natural way to explain the nature of manna; it was truly "bread from heaven." Manna was a type of Jesus, who is "Bread of life" (John 6:32–35).

17:6 This passage is one that Paul refers to in 1 Corinthians 10:4 (other possibilities include Num. 20:8–11; Ps. 78:15, 16). Paul affirms that the rock "was Christ." He does this in much the same sense that Jesus says that the bread "is my body" (Matt. 26:26). The relationship is a symbolic one, not referring to His essence. The rock provided water for Israel, and it was smitten in the process, just as Jesus was smitten in His work of providing salvation. This correspondence between historical events and the ultimate, greater truths to which they point is called typology. While this concept is a genuine part of the method of God's Old Testament revelation, it is a concept that is often carried to extremes.

19:1 Israel had now arrived at Mount Sinai where they would remain for almost a year (Ex. 19:1, cf. Num. 10:11). Some of the high points and low points of their history occurred here. At Sinai, they rebelled against God and made an idol of gold (Ex. 32), but also at this holy mountain they received and ratified the Ten Commandments and most of the Law of Moses (Ex. 19—24).

19:5, 6 God here makes a conditional promise to Israel that if they would obey Him and keep His covenant, He would regard and treat them in a special way. The people chose instead to make a golden calf

20:1–17 With these Ten Commandments the covenant with Israel begins. The ancient rabbis isolated 613 separate commandments in the entire Law of Moses, but these ten are the principles upon which the rest are based. By themselves they are called "the words of the covenant" (Ex. 34:28). The first four commandments deal directly with man's relationship with and especially his reverence toward God, while the latter six have to do with man's relationship with other human beings. The first four have as their theme total love for God, as expressed in Deuteronomy 6:5. The last six are summarized in the statement in Leviticus 19:18: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself." Therefore, Jesus took 613 commandments which had been condensed to ten in the Law of Moses and reduced them to two (see Matt. 22:35–40). All of God's commandments in the Old Testament dealing with how His people should live may be abbreviated simply to have love for God and for man.

23:11 This was a sabbath rest for the land. A fuller form of this law of the sabbatical year is found in Leviticus 25:1–7. Though it followed sound agricultural principles (restoring fertility to the soil), this was not the purpose stated for its observance. The natural uncultivated growth of the grain and fruit would be a much needed resource for the poor and even provide food for the wild animals.

wcj,pp,hinc,pnx935 pr413 df,nn4725 pnl834 hipf3559
and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared.

23:14–17 These three appearances before God by the people were three of the seven annual feasts of the Jews (see Lev. 23:16, 17, 33–36). They are listed as the Feast of Unleavened Bread (which was closely associated with the Passover; see Ex. 12:1–11, 14–20; Lev. 23:4–8; Deut. 16:1–8), the Feast of Harvest or Firstfruits (later called the Feast of Weeks and in New Testament times known as Pentecost [see Lev. 23:9–14; Deut. 16:9–12]), and the Feast of Ingathering (later called the Feast of Tabernacles; see Lev. 23:33–36, 39–43; Deut. 16:13–15). At the time of each of these feasts, all males were to make a pilgrimage to the sanctuary, which was at this time the Tabernacle and later became the Temple in Jerusalem.

23:20–23 There is strong evidence that the appearances of the "angel of the LORD" are in fact preincarnate appearances of Christ, the Son of God. Things are said of the angel of the LORD that go beyond the category of angels, and are applicable only to Christ. Hagar called Him by the name of God (Gen. 16:13). When the angel of the LORD appeared to Moses from within the burning bush, the text of the Scripture, the angel Himself, and Moses all affirm that the angel is God (Ex. 3:2–6). Here in Exodus chapter twenty-three it is said of the angel of the LORD that He has the power to forgive sins and that He has the name of God in Him (cf. Luke 7:49; Mark 2:7). No man could see God and live, but the Son of God, who is the fullness of the Godhead bodily, has declared Him (Ex. 33:20; John 1:18; Col. 2:9).

25:7 The word "ephod" (646) is a Hebrew name for the sacred upper garment of the priest, of plain linen for the regular priest. It was multi-colored and embroidered especially for the high priest. The breastplate, which was worn by the high priest alone, went on top of the ephod or upper garment. It was square and contained twelve precious stones, one for each tribe, inset. It extended from the waist to the shoulders and was connected at the shoulders by a gem. The robe was sleeveless under the ephod and came down to the ankles.

25:8, 9 The Lord commanded Moses to build a sanctuary. It was to be a tabernacle or moveable tent which would be suitable for Israel's nomadic lifestyle. The Levites would have responsibility for it (Num. 18:2–4). It was to be a dwelling place for the Lord among His people (v. 8) and a depository for the tables of the law or testimony, hence it was called "the tabernacle of testimony" (Ex. 38:21). Also, it was known as the "tent of meeting" (Ex. 40:34), because the Lord met His people there. Its general designation was "the house of the LORD" (Ex. 34:26), and it was to be filled with "the glory of the LORD" (Ex. 40:36–38) and by His presence. From there He would lead the children of Israel on their journey.

26:31–35 The veil, literally "a separation," was hung between the Holy of Holies and the Holy Place. Its function was to separate all men, even the priests, from the presence of God. Only one man, the high priest, went beyond that veil and he was permitted to do so only once a year, on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:1–19). His duty was to take the blood of a bull as an offering for his sins and the sins of the priests, and the blood of a goat as an offering for the sins of the people. The meaning was clear: man was separated from God by reason of sin and could approach Him only through blood which was presented by a priest, who prior to the sin-offerings had to offer incense that he might find mercy and not die (Lev. 16:13). When Jesus died on the cross, the veil hanging in the temple was torn in two (Matt. 27:51). Jesus went beyond that veil (Heb. 9:12, 24) as high priest (Heb. 9:11; 7:23–28), taking His own blood (Heb. 9:12), and making full atonement (Heb. 10:10, 12).

the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgment of the children of Israel upon his nn,pnx3820 pp,pl,cs,nn6440 nn3068 nn8548
heart before the LORD continually.

28:30 This is the first Old Testament mention of these sacred objects called the "Urim and Thummim." They were used by the priests to receive divine messages and were kept in the high priest's breastplate. The mention of the ephod in connection with simple oracles (1 Sam. 23:6, 9–12) suggests that at times these objects may have been associated with the priest's ephod. No one knows what the Urim and Thummim looked like or how they worked, but it appears that they provided only yes or no answers. Sometimes there was no answer given at all. This would help explain King Saul's inability to get an answer from God on two different occasions (1 Sam. 14:36, 37; 28:6). The Urim and Thummim are not mentioned in the Old Testament between the early monarchy and post-exilic times. This was the period of the prophets, when God revealed Himself much more fully than in the simple answers to questions posed by priests. Quite possibly the lack of description of the Urim and Thummim is deliberate, in order to prevent copies from being made.

32:25–29 This passage describes how the Levites won the privilege of serving the Lord in the Tabernacle. Apparently some of the people were still rebellious. The Levites responded immediately when Moses asked the question, "Who is on the LORD's side?" They were then commissioned by Moses to go throughout the camp executing the rebels. For their loyalty to God, they became His special ministers.

The priests were a special class within the tribe of Levi whose ministry included the more sacred functions, which functions other members of the tribe were not permitted to perform. For even though, in a general sense, God wanted all Israel to be a "kingdom of priests" (Ex. 19:6), a special priesthood already existed (Ex. 19:22, 24). Only Aaron and his sons could be priests (Ex. 28:1; Num. 3:10). The choice of Aaron's line was made a hereditary appointment after Phinehas' act of zealous loyalty to God (Num. 25:6–13).

32:26, 27 The Law had just been given to Moses by God and it strictly forbade both the worship of false gods and murder. In this passage, God commanded that the people who were guilty of breaking the Law were to be put to death. Even though the Israelites had promised earlier, "All the words which the Lord hath said will we do" (Ex. 24:3), these had forsaken God. In His sovereignty, God required that this sin be judged. The children of Israel were merely the means that God chose to carry out His judgment.

40:34 The phrase "the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle," indicated that He approved of their work. Evidently, this glory appeared before Israel in the form of a cloud, the same cloud by which the Lord Himself went before the people when they came out of Egypt. At night it took the form of a pillar of fire (Ex. 13:21, 22). In these forms, He led them throughout their journey (Ex. 40:38). When Solomon had completed building the temple (2 Chr. 5:13, 14) it was also filled with the glory of the Lord in the form of a cloud. During the time of Zedekiah that glory departed (Ezek. 11:22, 23) and will not return again until it fills the millennial Temple (Ezek. 43:1–9). When this Temple is built, God promises that the "latter glory of this house shall be greater than the former . . . and in this place I shall give peace" (see the note on Hag. 2:6–9).

LEVITICUS

The title "Leviticus" is a transliteration of the title in the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the Old Testament. It is so named because it records the duties of the Levites. The Hebrew name for the book (the first word of the Hebrew text) means "and He called." This title is representative of the content and purpose of the book, namely the calling of God's people, and in particular the calling of the Levites to minister before Him.

This third book of Moses is a primer for the moral and ethical instruction of the chosen people of God. As such, it contains civil, sanitary, ceremonial, moral, and religious regulations for the nation of Israel. All the offerings, as well as the ceremonies and laws, served to constantly remind Israel that God was eminently holy. God could be approached only by the priests, and then only in strict obedience to the detailed instructions for purification. God required the sacrifice of innocent animals for the covering of man's sin. These sacrifices were symbolic of the ultimate sacrifice which would take away the sin of the whole world (John 1:29).

1:1 The Book of Leviticus emphasizes the fact that God was speaking directly to Moses. In fact, this is recorded no less than fifty times in the book. In this verse He speaks to Moses from the Holy of Holies above the ark of the covenant. This speaking face-to-face with God distinguished Moses even from the prophets who followed him (Deut. 34:10).

4:26 This passage might seem to suggest that forgiveness and atonement came about through the act of the sacrifice. However, the Scriptures deny that animal sacrifices can take away sin (Heb. 10:4, 11). Transgressions were not forgiven under the Law through the shedding of the blood of animals, because their blood could offer no real atonement. The sacrifices made under the Old Testament Law were symbolical and typical of the atonement of Christ. Therefore, forgiveness in the Old Testament was granted in anticipation of and by faith in Jesus' final offering (Heb. 9:15).

10:1–3 Nadab and Abihu's sin in offering "strange fire" to Yahweh is not defined in the text. It is most likely that they performed some ceremony in a forbidden manner. Some have suggested that these newly consecrated priests were anxious to begin the more honorable portion of their duty, and so they proceeded to offer incense when they had not been commanded to do so. Special incense had been prepared for such an offering (Ex. 39:38). However, this incense was likely kept in the custody of Moses or Aaron, requiring Nadab and Abihu to use common incense. Hence, they were guilty of offering strange incense (Ex. 30:9). They may also have been drunk (see Lev. 10:9). Whatever their sinful action may have been, the punishment for it was swift and complete; another fire came forth from God and consumed them. There is a similar instance of judgment in the New Testament where Ananias and Sapphira died immediately after lying to God, and it had a beneficial sobering effect upon all who heard about it (Acts 5:1–11).

11:44, 45 The holiness of God is a major theme throughout the whole Old Testament, and particularly in the Book of Leviticus. God commands His people to reflect His holiness in their lives. Peter quotes these verses (see also Lev. 19:2; 20:26) to challenge his readers to live pure lives (1 Pet. 1:15, 16). God's people are to live holy lives because they have been separated from the world unto God (2 Cor. 6:17, quoted from Is. 52:11).

her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore

6 And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtledove, for a sin offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

7 Who shall offer it before the LORD, and make*an*atonement for her;
and she shall be cleansed from*the*issue of her blood. This is the law for her 🔑 18:21 Perhaps one of the most atrocious elements of the religion of Israel's neighbors in Canaan was the practice of human sacrifice. This passage and others (Lev. 20:2; Deut. 18:10) show how God hates this practice. Yet, some of the kings of Judah sacrificed their sons to Molech, the Ammonite national deity (2 Kgs. 16:3; 21:6; see the note on 2 Kgs 23:10). The people of Judah even built a special high place where they could sacrifice their sons and daughters (Jer. 7:31). All of this was done in the worship of foreign gods, which only served to intensify God's hatred of it.

19:9, 10 The Law of Moses contains numerous laws that protect poor people and foreigners. These verses, along with Leviticus 23:22, put restrictions on how closely crops could be harvested, so the poor would have something to glean. That the law was being followed during the period of the judges is evident from the fact that Ruth gleaned in the field of Boaz, her future husband (Ruth 2:2–7).

usual reason to lend to a fellow countryman was to help a poor man get back on his feet, and no interest was to be exacted (Lev. 25:35–38). The case was different for foreigners, who could be charged interest (Deut. 23:20) and whose debts were not cancelled on the Sabbatical Year (Deut. 15:1–3). Nevertheless, Leviticus 19:33, 34 expresses the overriding ethical concern, and it is based on the fact that they themselves had been foreigners in Egypt.

25:1–55 The provisions of this chapter prevent overworking the land, call for regular land redistribution, and forbid perpetual servitude. These actions may have been intended to eliminate poverty (Deut. 15:4, 5). Years are divided into groups of seven, with the seventh designated as the Sabbatical Year (year of rest). In that year no farming was to be done (Lev. 25:3–5), debts among the Israelites were to be cancelled (Deut. 15:2), and indentured servants were to be set free (Deut. 15:12). This cycle was to repeat itself seven times, for a total of forty-nine years. The fiftieth year was set aside as the Year of Jubilee (Lev. 25:8, 9). The regulations for the Year of Jubilee were identical to those of the Sabbatical Year, with one exception. In the Year of Jubilee all real estate, except that within walled cities, automatically reverted to the family to which it had originally been assigned (Lev. 25:13).

These things were not proposed merely as sound social legislation, for each one had a specific theological cause as well. Servants were to be released in the Year of Jubilee because God had rescued the Israelites from Egypt and they were all His servants (Lev. 25:55). The land was to be redeemed regularly, because it actually belonged to God, not Israel (Lev. 25:23, 24). Even centuries later, the duty of keeping ancestral real estate in the family was Naboth's reason for refusing to sell his vineyard to King Ahab (1 Kgs. 21:3). For an example of the influence of these regulations during the period of the judges, see the note on Ruth 4:1–8.

NUMBERS

The book of Numbers is so named because it records several occasions when the people were counted or numbered (chaps. 1; 3; 4; 26). The Hebrew title (the first word in the Hebrew text) means "in the wilderness," and appropriately gives the setting for the events in this book. The Book of Numbers relates the earliest experiences of Israel under the theocracy. When the people were obedient to God, they enjoyed His blessing and protection (Num. 21:21–35), but their disobedience brought His judgment (Num. 21:4–9). Despite the wonders that God performed on Israel's behalf, the people were ready to return to Egypt on several occasions (Num. 11:4–6; 14:2–4; 20:4, 5; 21:5) because of their unbelief—it was easier to get Israel out of Egypt than to get Egypt out of the Israelites!

A large portion of the forty years that Israel spent in the wilderness is covered in this book. During this time God removed the generation that failed to trust Him (all but Joshua and Caleb, Num. 14:30) and molded the new generation into a unified nation, prepared to conquer the land He had promised them.

1:1 God speaks with Moses one month after the construction of the Tabernacle was completed (Ex. 40:17) and one year and fifteen days after the original Passover, when Israel began its journey from Egypt (Ex. 12:6; Num. 33:3).

1:2 The Book of Numbers, as its name suggests, records the taking of two censuses (numberings) of Israel. The first census was taken just before Israel left Mount Sinai, because their intention was to conquer Canaan immediately. Unfortunately, the people sinned at Kadesh-barnea, and had to spend a total of forty years in the wilderness, until all the men who rebelled against God had died. This was a military census, counting only the males at the military age of twenty years old and older. For a discussion of the procedure used for counting the tribe of Levi, see the note on Numbers 3:39.

3:10 See the note on Exodus 32:25–29.

3:12, 13 In the time of the patriarchs, the firstborn son had a position of special honor and responsibility in the family structure. God proclaimed Israel to be His firstborn (Ex. 4:22). With the death of the Egyptians' firstborn sons, all the firstborn sons of Israel who had been saved on the night of the Passover were to be sanctified unto the Lord (Ex. 11:4, 5; 12:21–29; 13:2, 11–16). These were set apart for the Lord and it was necessary to make a sacrifice for their redemption (Ex. 22:29). Now all the male members of the tribe of Levi, from one month old and above, were substituted for the firstborn males of the rest of the tribes of Israel (see vv. 41, 45). Thus, the Levites were to be consecrated for the Lord's service. See the note on Num. 3:46–51.

3:39 A different method was used to number those of the tribe of Levi than was used to number the rest of Israel. All males as old as one month were counted, and the total for the census before Israel left Mount Sinai was 22,000. Using the same method, 23,000 were recorded at the second census, about thirty-seven years later (Num. 26:26). Since Levi was not to be given a separate tribal territory, the figures were kept separate from the number of the rest of Israel.

3:46–51 The firstborn of Israel were numbered at 22,273 and the Levites at 22,000 (v. 39), a difference of 273. In the substitution of the Levites for the firstborn these 273 extra among the firstborn were to be redeemed by a contribution of five shekels of silver apiece which were to be given to Aaron and his sons, the priestly family. The shekel of silver was to weigh 20 gerahs (Ex. 30:12–16). A gerah has been estimated to have been slightly less than six-tenths of a gram. Therefore, the shekel would have weighed approximately eleven and one-half grams or four-tenths of an ounce. Hence, the redemption price for each of the 273 extra among the firstborn was two ounces of silver.

5:11–31 When a married woman was suspected of sexual infidelity, God's personal judgment was to be sought in the matter. The punishment for such unfaithfulness was death (Lev. 20:10). Sometimes called the "law of jealousy," this passage contains the prescribed ritual by which the priest was to ask God to reveal whether this woman was guilty or innocent.

6:2–21 The word Nazarite, not to be confused with Nazarene, means "separated," and in this context means specifically "one who was separated unto the Lord." It was probably similar to a vow which existed among the Hebrews prior to Mount Sinai, but in this passage, it is brought under the regulation of the law. By the terms of the vow, men or women could voluntarily separate themselves unto the Lord for a specific period of time, even for life. They did not, however, become hermits, separating themselves from society. Samson (Judg. 13:5) and Samuel (1 Sam. 1:11, 28) are two of the Nazarites mentioned in the Bible. It is also thought that John the Baptist may have been a Nazarite (Luke 1:15) and that perhaps this is the vow associated with the Apostle Paul (Acts 21:23–26).

11:1–5 The source of discontent and complaint is described as "the mixed multitude," which is rendered in other versions as "rabble" and "foreigners." These people had come out of Egypt with Israel (Ex. 12:38). Since they were not Hebrews, they had no personal attachment either to the promise or to God. They were tired of the manna and, forgetting all of the reasons for fleeing from Egypt, they remembered only the fish, onions, and garlic which were formerly available to them. They were held in low esteem by the Israelites although Israel allowed themselves to be influenced by their grumbling.

12:3 Some scholars have thought it necessary to consider this verse a later insertion in the text, possibly by Joshua, as it did not seem proper for Moses (the author) to glorify himself. However, the purpose of the statement was not to glorify Moses but to explain why he took no steps to justify himself when Miriam and Aaron questioned his authority as God's spokesman. The book was written by Moses under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. The same objectivity that allowed him to record his spiritual successes also allowed for the recording of his own faults and sins.

12:7 Moses was more than just the leader of Israel or a well-known prophet. The writer of Hebrews describes him as a type of Christ (Heb. 3:2–6). He was chosen by God to be a deliverer (Ex. 3:1–10) and was designated as a prophet (Deut. 18:15). As a servant in God's house, he was considered faithful and trustworthy (Heb. 3:5, 6). Moses was a mediator between Jehovah and Israel (Ex. 17:1–7; 32:30–35) as Christ is for His church (see 1 John 2:1, 2).

12:10 Miriam had apparently initiated this insurrection against Moses (v. 1), and was therefore punished. Aaron was again showing his lack of spiritual backbone, just as he did in the incident of the golden calf (Ex. 32:1–6; 21–24).

13:17 The word Neghev (5045), translated "southward," is better translated "south country." The south country was a well-defined territory forming the southernmost and least fertile part of Canaan and was subsequently a part of Judah's inheritance. It extended northward from Kadesh to within a few miles of Hebron and from the Dead Sea westward to the Mediterranean.

The word har (2022), translated "mountain," may also be used to refer to a range of hills or mountains. This was a description of the country of southern and central Canaan, mostly within the borders of the inheritance of Judah and Ephraim. It began a few miles south of Hebron and extended northward to the plain of Jezreel, continuing northwest to the sea just above Mount Carmel.

13:22 Until recently, Zoan was identified with Tanis and Avaris, later Egyptian cities. More recent archaeological evidence has again confirmed the biblical account, suggesting that a city in the area of modern Qantir is Zoan. Moreover, this city is doubtless the site of "Rameses," mentioned in Exodus 1:11. This would seem to confirm that the Hyksos rulers began the oppression of Israel in Egypt. It was near Hebron that the Hebrew patriarchs had been buried (Gen. 23:19; 49:31).

13:26 Kadesh, also known as Kadesh-Barnea, was an oasis in the wilderness just south of Canaan proper. It was often a place of defeat, failure, and death for the nation of Israel during their years of wandering. The people rebelled when the twelve spies returned to Kadesh (Num. 14:1–10); they were repulsed in their rash attack from Kadesh (Num. 14:40–45); Miriam, Moses' sister, died and was buried at Kadesh (Num. 20:1); and the great sin of Moses in smiting the rock occurred at Kadesh (Num. 20:11, 12). Aaron died shortly afterwards on Mount Hor (Num. 20:23–29), and Moses died on Mount Nebo (Deut. 34:1–5).

The rebellion at Kadesh is expounded upon in Psalm 95:7b–11. The psalmist attributed Israel's loss of God's "rest" to this rebellion. In addition, the Book of Hebrews affirms that the loss was only temporary, and that God's "rest" was still available if God's people in the New Testament did not "fall after the same example of unbelief" (Heb. 4:9, 11).

13:28 Regarding the cities that were "walled and very great," modern archaeologists have found that there were indeed numerous walled fortresses throughout Canaan even in 1440 B.C. These cities made invasion by foreign armies difficult for some time, until the science of siege warfare was as well developed as the techniques of fortification.

13:30–33 The spies reported that the people of the land were large: "men of great stature" and "giants." The Hebrew word for "giant" is nephilim (5303), which appears elsewhere only in Genesis 6:4 (see the note on this passage). Obviously these people have no connection to those in Genesis chapter six, since those events occurred before the flood. The emphasis of this passage may be that these sons of Anak were not only large, but violent and evil as well (see Deut. 2:10, 11 where "giant" is a translation of rephā'im [7497]).

Caleb and Joshua were the spies who brought back the faithful report that, with the Lord's help, Canaan could easily be taken (Num. 14:6–9). For their faithfulness, God allowed them to survive the wilderness experience and enter Canaan (Num. 14:30). When the second census was taken as preparations were being made to move into Canaan (see the note on Num. 26:52–56), Caleb and Joshua were the only ones from the original group that were still alive. After the major campaigns of the conquest were completed, Joshua divided the land of Canaan by lot. In keeping with God's promise forty-five years earlier, Caleb was the first to be given his land (Num. 14:24; Josh. 14:6–15). He was allotted Hebron, near the cave of Machpelah, where the patriarchs had been buried.

14:22 There are two views concerning Israel's having tempted God "ten times." Some scholars hold that there are actually ten instances recorded in Scripture which involve Israel and their exodus from Egypt. They were the two temptations at the Red Sea (Ex. 14:11; Ps. 106:7); demanding water twice (Ex. 15:23; 17:2); demanding food twice (Ex. 16:20, 27); demanding flesh twice (Ex. 16:3; Num. 11:4); the incident with the golden calf (Ex. 32); and the incident with the twelve spies (Ex. 13). Others say that the number "ten" times that Israel tempted God is not to be taken literally. They say it is symbolic of completeness. In either case it refers to Israel's frequent acts of rebellion, of which the Lord had grown weary.

14:24, 30 See the note on Numbers 13:30–33 regarding Joshua and Caleb.

17:8 God used Aaron's rod as an answer to Israel who complained against Moses and Aaron after many unfaithful people had been killed during the rebellion of Korah. Each of the rods were alike in that they had long been severed from the parent tree, but God chose the rod of Aaron and caused it to bloom blossoms and yield almonds as a sign of His approval. Aaron's rod was to be placed in front of the ark of the covenant (later within the ark, Heb. 9:4) as a sign to those who would rebel and complain against God and His spokesman.

20:12 This sin of unbelief caused Moses to be excluded from entering Canaan. His sin is seen in his attitude and in his action of striking the rock, because Moses did not credit God's ability to bring forth water by his simply speaking. In Numbers 27:14, the sin is called rebellion, while in Deuteronomy 32:51 it is described as trespassing and failing to sanctify God by breaking faith and failing to hold God in reverence. Both of these aspects can be seen in Moses' refusal to do what God had commanded him to do.

20:17 The "king's highway" was the direct road from the Gulf of Aqabah to Syria on the east side of the Dead Sea and Jordan valley. Its entire length has been a valuable source of archaeological information for modern scholars. Ruins found there indicate that it was in use as early as the twenty-third century B.C. During Solomon's reign it was part of the commercial trade route from Ezion-geber to Judah and Syria. Recovered Roman milestones indicate that Trajan had used part of it in his road system in the second century A.D. Today a modern highway covers a part of that route.

21:4–9 Since it appears that the people were plagued by serpents for some time (the Lord did not take away the serpents as they had requested), it is likely that they carried the brazen serpent with them, setting it up wherever they camped, and that it was fixed in a permanent location once they were in the land. It was later destroyed by King Hezekiah because the people had begun to worship it (2 Kgs. 18:4).

The brazen serpent is a type of Christ (John 3:14, 15), and since a crossbeam was likely needed to support the snake, the pole is considered by some to be a symbol of the Cross. The Jews themselves claim that faith in God, not the mere sight of the brazen serpent, was what healed. Both testaments affirm that such faith in the Lord Jesus is the way of salvation (Is. 45:22; Heb. 12:2).

22:5—24:25 Balaam lived a long distance away from Moab, yet he must have been quite famous for Balak to have known of him and sent for him. Balak was motivated by his fear of Israel (22:5, 6). Balaam refers to his activity as divination (Num. 22:7; 23:23; 24:1), but in this he may have been reflecting on a foreign custom, as did Joseph (Gen. 44:15). Certainly Balaam's response to Balak was done in accordance with the Lord's instructions. However, a comparison of 22:20 and 22:22 suggests that Balaam may have been motivated by something other than the fear of God. Certainly Balaam's later suggestions to the Midianites were opposed to God's plans, and brought about his own death, judgment on Israel, and the destruction of Midian (Num. 25:1–9; 31:2, 8, 15–17). Balaam's prophecies of blessing on Israel and judgment on Israel's enemies, especially the messianic reference (Num. 24:17), are indeed remarkable.

Archaeological evidence from Deir Alla indicates that Balaam was highly regarded by pagans 500 years after his death. Two New Testament writers tell us that Balaam is an example of those who sin for personal gain (2 Pet. 2:15; Jude 11). John uses Balaam as an example of one who taught others how to sin (Rev. 2:14).

26:52–56 Approximately thirty-seven years after the first census, a second one was taken following the same procedure (Num. 26:1–51). These figures were to be used in determining the size of the territory allotted to each tribe (Num. 26:52–56). When the figures from the two censuses are compared, some interesting facts emerge. Only two men, Joshua and Caleb, who had not rebelled at Kadesh-barnea, were counted in both censuses. The first numbering found 603,550 fighting men in the twelve tribes (Num. 1:46), a remarkable number for Moses to have led through the wilderness. The totals for the second census were 601,730 (Num. 26:51), which reflects almost no change in thirty-seven years. The composition of the two groups was, however, totally different. Had the 24,000 who were killed just before the second census because of their sin at Baal-peor (Num. 25:9) still been alive, the adult male population would have shown a modest increase. See the note on Numbers 1:2.

27:18–23 Knowing that it would not be long before he would die, Moses asked God to choose a successor to lead Israel in his place (v. 16). God selected Joshua, a man who had been Moses' close associate and servant since the time when Israel was still at Mount Sinai (Ex. 24:13; 32:17; 33:11). Even before their arrival at Sinai, Moses had appointed Joshua to be the leader of the army against Amalek (Ex. 17:8–13). His public commissioning involved more than the role of military leader, but it was in this area that he was to make his greatest contribution. Joshua is mentioned twice in the New Testament (Acts 7:45; Heb. 4:8).

28:11–15 The phrase "beginnings of your months" refers to the observance of the new moon (1 Chr. 23:31; Ezra 3:5). Though it was characterized by the blowing of trumpets, it is not to be confused with the Feast of Trumpets (Num. 29:1–6). The Feast of Trumpets was celebrated at the beginning of the seventh month, not the first day of every month as is the case with these observances. Special sacrifices were offered, and it was a time of inquiring of God's messengers and worshiping at God's house, as well as a time for fellowship (1 Sam. 20:5, 18; 2 Kgs. 4:23). The observance was one of great solemnity; all business and work was to cease. When Israel began to approach it with insincerity and treated it as a mere ritual, God condemned its observance (Is. 1:13, 14).

DEUTERONOMY

"Deuteronomy" comes from the transliteration of a Greek word which means "second law." This title for the book is derived from the incorrect translation of Deuteronomy 17:18 in the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the Old Testament. The Hebrew text is properly translated in the KJV, "that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book." Deuteronomy is not a "second Law," but merely a repetition and expansion of the laws contained in the first books of the Pentateuch. The Hebrew title (the first words of the text) means "these are the words."

Deuteronomy is the fifth and final book of the Pentateuch or the Law of Moses. The three final discourses of Moses which are recorded in this book (Deut. 1:6—4:43; 4:44—26:19; 27—31) were given while the Israelites were encamped in the plains of Moab. These discourses reviewed the history of the Israelites up to that time, repeated and expanded upon the laws that God had given, and listed the promised blessings for obedience and cursings for disobedience. Moses was addressing the children of Israel only two months before they would cross the Jordan into Canaan (Deut. 1:3, cf. Josh. 4:19).

The form of the Book of Deuteronomy is very similar to that of the vassal-treaties written prior to 1000 B.C. It contains a historical introduction, an enumeration of laws, and concluding threats and promises. Unfortunately, Israel did not take heed to this or subsequent warnings that they would be judged for their disobedience. They were commanded not to do that which was right in their own eyes (Deut. 12:8), but this later became a characteristic of the entire nation (Judg. 17:6; 21:25). They were also given instructions which specified what kind of king should rule over them and outlined his responsibilities, but these directives were often forgotten or ignored (Deut. 17:14–20, cf. 1 Sam. 8:7–9; 1 Kgs. 10:26; 11:1–8).

Sections of Deuteronomy are strongly prophetic in nature. For example, the discourse on the prophet who would be like Moses (Deut. 18) is a prophecy of the Messiah. Likewise, certain portions of the book have great significance to the history of Israel. Consequently, words and phrases from Deuteronomy reappear throughout the Old Testament. The prophets in particular sought to call the people back to the standards found in this book.

The New Testament writers quoted from the Book of Deuteronomy nearly two hundred times. Christ Himself quoted from it exclusively in His answers to Satan's temptations (Matt. 4:1–11, cf. Deut. 6:13, 16; 8:3).

1:1 The phrase "on this side Jordan" should read "beyond Jordan" as it does in Deuteronomy 3:20, 25. This was the common term used for land east of the Jordan River. Later, the land was inhabited by Greeks, who named the area Perea. The "wilderness" is a general reference to the region southeast of Jordan; the "plain over against the Red Sea" is more specifically the land along the Rift Valley from the Dead Sea to the Gulf of Aqabah.

1:16 The Hebrew word gēr (1616), translated "stranger," means a "sojourner," "immigrant," or "alien." These were non-Israelites who, for the most part, enjoyed equal rights under the Law of Moses while residing with their Hebrew neighbors. If they were poor, they were provided for along with the Levites, the orphans, and the widows. However, they were required to be circumcised and conform to the Law of Moses.

2:23 The word translated "Hazerim" is not a proper noun but a word that means "villages" or "enclosures." The Avim mentioned in this verse are called Avites in Joshua 13:3. They were the scattered remnant of a people conquered by the Caphtorim, a tribe descended from the Egyptians (Gen. 10:14; 1 Chr. 1:12). Their name means "ruins" and seems to be a statement about their fallen state. "Azzah" refers to Gaza of the New Testament and modern times.

4:13, 14 This was the covenant that the people entered into at Mount Horeb. It was based on the Ten Commandments, but included much additional material incorporated into Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers. After the people became fearful, they were sent to their tents, while God delivered the remainder of the instruction directly to Moses. This part of Deuteronomy is called a "historical prologue." It parallels similar prologues in treaties of Moses' day.

Remember God Every Day

6 Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it:

2 That thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged.

3 Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

4 Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God is one LORD:

5 And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

6 And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

7 And thou shalt teach*them*diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

8 And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

9 And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

6:4–9 To the Jew, this is the most important text in the Old Testament. Jesus Himself called the injunction in 6:5 "the first and great commandment" (Matt. 22:36–38; see the note on Ex. 20:1–17). The Jews refer to Deuteronomy 6:4 as the "Shema," naming it after the first word in the text. In this instance the word means to heed, or listen and obey. Moses is teaching not only the priority of belief in one God, but also a means to preserve that belief. As time went on, the proper understanding of the Shema with its spiritual implications was no longer grasped by the people (Zech. 7:12–14; James 1:22–25). This absence of saving knowledge became a factor in their spiritual downfall (Hos. 4:6) which ultimately led to the deportation of Israel and the exile of Judah.

6:13, 16 Jesus quoted part of verse thirteen and Deuteronomy 10:20 in response to one of Satan's temptations (Matt. 4:10; Luke 4:8). In fact, the early part of this book, which was spoken by Moses while Israel was still in the period of her wilderness wanderings, formed the basis of all three of Jesus' responses to Satan. "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God" (Matt. 4:7; Luke 4:12) comes from Deuteronomy 6:16, and "Man shall not live by bread alone" (Matt. 4:4; Luke 4:4) is a quotation of Deuteronomy 8:3.

10:16 Circumcision had been instituted as an outward sign of obedience and of relationship to God (Gen. 17:9–14). The citizen of a country has certain rights because of that citizenship. Circumcision was a sign, not that one was a citizen of the nation of Israel, but that he had certain rights under the covenant. In this verse the figure of circumcision is used to call for a change of heart. The circumcision of the flesh could not create a saving relationship with God. Indeed, the circumcision of the heart (repentance unto salvation) was that by which an Israelite (male or female) was made an heir to the promise of eternal life (Gal. 3:29).

10:20 See the note on Deuteronomy 6:13, 16.

14:3–21 In this passage God declares certain animals to be "unclean," thereby making it unlawful for the Israelites to eat them. They were, however, free to partake of those animals which are declared to be "clean." There are three views as to why God established this system. Some believe that the "unclean" animals were designated as such for hygienic purposes. They speculate that these animals posed certain health risks for those who would eat them, even after the animals had been properly cooked and prepared. Others have suggested that since the Israelites would soon be entering the Promised Land, this system was intended to distinguish God's people from the religions and practices of their pagan neighbors. Therefore, certain pagan practices were not allowed, such as eating or drinking blood and the boiling of a calf or small animal in its mother's milk (see v. 21), since those things were part of the idolatrous rituals of the heathen people living around them. Finally, others contend that there was nothing in the animals themselves that warranted their designation as clean or unclean, but that God established the system as a test of Israel's obedience and loyalty to Him. Notice that the last two views are not necessarily mutually exclusive.

17:14–20 See the note on 1 Samuel 8:5–7.

17:16 The regulations mentioned in this verse, namely the multiplying of horses and wives, were set up so that the king's attention would not be turned from God to a reliance on himself, or worse yet, on idols. God specifically commanded that the children of Israel rely on Him when it came to military endeavors, not on horses or chariots (Josh. 11:4, 6). Israel's kings would be tempted to amass as much protection as they thought they needed; in doing so, however, their hearts would be turned away from God. The example of God destroying the Egyptians in the Red Sea was intended to show Israel that accumulating horses for the purpose of building military strength was unnecessary as long as they trusted exclusively in God (Ex. 15:19, 21; Deut. 11:4). When Elisha and his servant were surrounded by the armies of Aram, God opened the eyes of the servant so that he could see God's army of chariots surrounding the Aramean forces. God was providing His watchcare over his servants. God wanted Israel to depend on Him, not on what man could do (Ps. 33:17; 147:10). David and Solomon are examples of kings who disobeyed this command (2 Sam. 8:4; 1 Kgs. 4:26; 10:25).

18:15–19 The identity of this unnamed prophet is not revealed anywhere in the Old Testament. By Jesus' day, the Jews had developed a clear-cut expectation of a yet future figure who would fulfill Moses' words. Priests and Levites from Jerusalem asked John the Baptist if he was "the Prophet," and he denied it (John 1:21). It is elsewhere revealed that "the Prophet" spoken of in these verses is the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 3:22, 23).
18:20–22 The existence of prophets during the period of the monarchy presented a number of problems, one of which was how to distinguish between the true and false ones. Turbulent times, during which the people wanted to hear words of hope and security, produced the greatest outbreak of prophets for hire and seers with optimistic lies. Shortly after Judah started going into exile in Babylon, but before the fall of Jerusalem, Jeremiah and Ezekiel had to contend with a rash of these charlatans, upon whom they issued stern denunciations (Jer. 23:9–32; Ezek. 13:1–23). The penalty for being a false prophet was death (Deut. 13:5; 18:20; see Jer. 28:16).

In this passage in Deuteronomy chapter eighteen, Moses gave one of the tests by which the people could distinguish a true prophet from a false one. If the prophet's message did not come true as predicted, he was a false prophet (see 1 Kgs. 22:28). In his conflict with the false prophet Hananiah, Jeremiah expressed the test positively, so that if the prophecy came true, all would know that Hananiah was a true prophet (Jer. 28:9). This was only a general rule which applied to the case at hand, because it was possible for a false prophet to utter a true message, either as a guess or as a test from the Lord to see whether the people would obey (Deut. 13:1–3). Another test for a true prophet was that he had to have the ability, as a sign of God's calling, to perform miracles (Ex. 4:6). A third test, though it did not always apply, was that an easy message in hard times was often an unreliable one (Jer. 23:16, 17, 29; 28:8, 9; Ezek. 13:10–16). The most important test of a true prophet was that the content of his message had to be consistent with all prior revelation. Thus, if a prophet said that Israel should serve another god, he was obviously false (Deut. 13:1–3). Similarly, in the New Testament both Paul and John taught that the content of the message already received was the standard by which to measure any new message, even if it came from Paul himself or an angel (Gal. 1:8) or a spirit masquerading as God's Spirit (1 John 4:1–3). By this test alone the claims of the false religions of the world, and of the cults in particular, are silenced.

19:1–10 This passage outlines how the Israelites were to establish "cities of refuge" when they had entered the Promised Land. These places were designed to take in those who were accused of homicide but perhaps guilty of only manslaughter (killing someone without malice). Provision was made for their safety until their case could be judged. In the Promised Land there were six such cities established. Three were located on the east side of the Jordan River, while three others were established on the west side. For an explanation of the Levitical cities, of which the six "cities of refuge" were a part, see the note on Joshua 21:2.

20:16–18 This is the final statement of God's justice on the seven peoples listed in this passage. Five hundred years before, God had stated that "their iniquity was not yet full" (Gen. 15:16), but it was now full to overflowing. Archaeological evidence reveals how incredibly depraved these tribes were. They practiced human sacrifice and every sort of sexual perversion. Because of the multitude and grievous nature of their sins, it is said that the land "vomiteth out her inhabitants" (Lev. 18:21–25). The sinfulness of these tribes would present a strong temptation to Israel and must therefore be wiped out. As the incident with the Moabites revealed (Num. 25:1–3), Israel was all too prone to adopt the idolatrous and inhuman practices of her neighbors. In fact, the inhabitants of Canaan that Israel did not destroy according to God's command are described as being "snares" to Israel (Ex. 23:33; 34:12; Deut. 7:16; 12:30).

land of Midian (Acts 7:29, 30). Finally, he lived forty years from God's call at the burning bush until his death, during which time he led the children of Israel out of Egypt.

JOSHUA

This book describes the conquest of the land of Canaan under the leadership of Joshua, the successor of Moses. His name means "Jehovah saves" or "Jehovah is salvation." The Greek transliteration of his name is "Jesus" (see Heb. 4:8).

Joshua had worked with Moses since the giving of the Ten Commandments at Mount Sinai. He continued to serve with Moses throughout the wilderness wanderings (Ex. 24:13), and became a strong leader who was full of faith and courage. Joshua and Caleb were in favor of conquering the land of Canaan in spite of the height and aggressive nature of the people there. Consequently, they were the only two of their generation that God permitted to cross the Jordan River (Num. 14:29, 30, 38; Deut. 1:35, 36).

The theme of the Book of Joshua is "victory through faith" (see Josh. 1:6–9). The land that God promised to Abraham (Gen. 15:18) was now being conquered. Joshua began by attacking a few key cities (e.g., Jericho and Ai) and breaking up dangerous coalitions among the Canaanites (Josh. 10:2–5). The conquest of the Promised Land under Joshua, however, was not complete. The Israelites continued to encounter resistance after they had settled in the land. In accordance with God's plan, it was left up to the individual tribes to slowly displace the Canaanites from their remaining strongholds (Ex. 23:27–31; Josh. 13:1–6; Judg. 3:1, 2).

1:1 Joshua is introduced as Moses' servant, which is seen in the Hebrew word meshārēth (8334) which is a participle meaning "one who ministers." Joshua's name had been changed from Oshea (Num. 13:16). He had been previously commissioned by God to be Moses' successor (Num. 27:16–23). This commission included instructions to inquire through the priests, via the Urim and Thummim, for answers from God. However, on this occasion of Joshua's charge to take command, God appeared directly to Joshua as He did with Moses (Num. 12:8) and later with the prophets.

1:3–6 This passage amplifies the physical nature of the land promised to the children of Israel, as had been affirmed before (Gen. 15:7–21; 28:13, 14). Many scholars deny any unconditional promise of a physical

1:13 It is important to realize that the term "rest," as used elsewhere, does not mean total peace; it is a relative term.

2:1 Some have tried to render this passage "the house of a woman" or "house of an innkeeper," but the translation "harlot's house" is the correct one. The Hebrew term zānāh (2181) is the common word for an "adulterer" or "prostitute" (Lev. 21:7; Jer. 5:7). Both the Old and New Testaments affirm that such a woman can be pardoned (Luke 7:37). Rahab was not only pardoned, but raised to a position of honor. She married into an Israelite family, and was blessed by being the ancestor of David (Ruth 4:21, 22), thus placing her in the line of Jesus, the Messiah (Matt. 1:5). Moreover, she is enshrined in the New Testament "hall of faith" (Heb. 11:31; James 2:25). It was not unusual for strangers and foreigners to go to Rahab's house, thus the spies would not represent any unusual activity there. Also, the traffic through a harlot's house would provide information on the local situation. Rahab is another case in which God did not bless someone for lying, but for her faith in the report that the spies gave (see the note on Ex. 1:17–20). Note that in this case as well as in Exodus, the issue was the loss of human life.

2:18 Many writers have said that throughout Scripture this concept of the "scarlet thread" can be found: the line of blood atonement began in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:21), was exemplified in the Passover (Ex. 12:1–28), and was finally fulfilled in Christ's sacrifice on the cross (Heb. 9:22; 1 Pet. 1:19, 20). Here the thread was the means of deliverance for Rahab and her family. All who were to be delivered had to trust Rahab and stay in her house.

3:15–17 Notice that the Lord did not stop the flow of the Jordan until the priests' feet were actually in the water. They were called upon to exercise their faith first. The swollen condition of the Jordan River at that time of the year emphasizes God's miraculous provision for Israel. Since irrigation now drains off much of its water, the Jordan no longer floods as it once did. Some scholars have suggested that an earthquake or landslide stopped the flow, but the text of Scripture refutes any attempt at explaining away God's supernatural intervention. The Jordan lies in a deep valley, and so does not spread out when it is flooded. It merely goes over its normal banks, and further up the valley sides. When it is flooded, the only way to get across the water is to swim or sail, but neither of these methods would have been possible for several million Israelites with children, livestock, and household goods.

4:9 The phrase "unto this day" signifies that when Joshua wrote this book at the end of his life (Josh. 24:26), these two pillars were still standing. For most of the year, the Jordan is a shallow river so the pillar of stones in the center of it would be visible as a sign.

4:10 Moses told Joshua that God would speak through him to the people and that God would be with him (see Deut. 31:7, 8).

4:19 After crossing the Jordan, Israel camped at Gilgal for a while before the conquest of Canaan began. Several things happened at Gilgal which signified that the wilderness wanderings were over and that Israel was embarking on a new phase of her national history. First, Joshua had the people set up twelve stones as a monument to the miraculous drying up of the Jordan for their crossing (Josh. 4:19–24). Next, the young males were circumcised, which reinstituted a practice that had not been kept for nearly forty years (5:2–9). With that accomplished (see Ex. 12:48), they could then observe the Passover (5:10). Finally, and probably most indicative of the end of their wanderings, on the day after the Passover, the manna stopped, and they ate from the produce of Canaan (5:11, 12).

5:13–15 The man who is called "the captain of the host of the LORD" is actually the Angel of the LORD, a preincarnate appearance of Jesus Christ (Ex. 3:2–6; Judg. 6:12, 16). This is seen in the use of the phrase in verse fifteen: "Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy." No man or angel could pronounce a place "holy." The angel of the LORD also appeared to Moses in the burning bush and used this phrase commanding Moses to take his shoes off (Ex. 3:5).

6:1–7 This was not a mere military confrontation with people who were entrenched in a formidable stronghold. The implications are more spiritual than political. While God was bringing judgment upon those who had long refused Him, He was working on behalf of the people with whom He had just renewed His covenant. The fall of Jericho sent a powerful message to the Canaanites that Israel's successes were not mere human victories of man against man, but victories by the true God of Israel over their gods. This event, following closely upon the crossing of the Jordan by miraculous means, impressed upon the people that the same God who had led their fathers out of Egypt and through the Red Sea was with Joshua just as surely as He had been with Moses. The most recent archaeological research at Jericho has confirmed the Bible's account that the city was destroyed around 1400 B.C.

6:21 This severe measure of killing every living thing was taken to prevent alien elements of Canaanite culture and worship, on the basis of their total corruption before God, from infecting Israel (see Rom. 1:18–32). ---

6:26 This curse fell upon Hiel the Bethelite in the early days of King Ahab (1 Kings 16:34). It was a local custom to dedicate the gates and walls of a new city by burying children inside the foundations.

7:1 The sin of Achan stands as a lesson to all Israel of the consequences to one who breaks faith with God. The nation as a collective whole was in a covenant relationship with God and was dealt with by Him not merely as a group of people living together under a common law for their own protection and to accomplish their own goals. Instead, He treated them as a whole. Understanding this concept is essential to understanding the words of Paul in Romans 5:12–21. Achan had defiled not only himself, but all of Israel. They were no longer acceptable to God because they, in the person of Achan, had broken the covenant. Therefore, God would no longer work for them in driving out the Canaanites. Only after Achan (and his family, because of their connection with him in the deed) had been dealt with did God release Israel from their guilt in the matter. Achan's sin was not simply one of stealing goods or even of covetousness. He clearly defied God by disobeying His command (vv. 1, 11). Achan's punishment (Josh. 22:20) was a warning to all that they should never allow their greed to cause them to forget God's will.

7:2–5 This unsuccessful first battle at Ai illustrates the partnership between God and Israel during the conquest of Canaan. When the people presumed upon the power of God and fought without consulting Him, they were not victorious. What should have been an easy victory turned into a painful defeat, because God was not with them.

11:21 The Anakim were the giants of whom the ten spies were so afraid (Num. 13:33). Caleb conquered them (Josh. 15:14). Caleb's action is probably in view here under Joshua's name as part of the larger campaign.

12:1 The extent of the conquest under Joshua's leadership was vast, but the task was too large to have been completed in his life time (Deut 7:22; Josh. 13:1–6). During the nearly seven-year military campaign (see Josh. 14:7–10), the borders of Israel were expanded from Kadesh-barnea in the south (Josh. 10:41) to the foothills of Mount Hermon in the north (Josh. 11:17). Joshua's task now was to distribute the land among the tribes and leave the further conquest to God (Josh. 13:6, 7). The details of that distribution are given in chapters 13—21.

63 As for the Jebusites the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the children of Judah

15:63 Jerusalem was located along the borders of the land that was allotted to both the tribe of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin (cf. Josh. 18:28). Both tribes attempted to drive out the Jebusites who inhabited the city, but they were unsuccessful on two consecutive campaigns (Judg. 1:8, 21). The city remained occupied by the Jebusites until David conquered them (2 Sam. 5:6–10).

19:1–9 Simeon's allotment was in the extreme south in the territory which was already given to Judah, because Judah was not large enough to fill all of her land. This had consequences for later times. During the period of the divided monarchy, although the tribe of Simeon was politically a part of the ten tribes of Israel, the tribe's proximity to Judah led to its eventual assimilation into Judah.

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baalath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and Gath-rimmon,

46 And Me-jarkon, and Rakkon, with the border before Japho.

47 And the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them: therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families, these cities with their villages.

19:40–48 Dan's inheritance was on the coastal plain south of the territory given to Ephraim, but she was unable to possess it. Therefore, the tribe took the city of Leshem above the Sea of Galilee in the extreme north and settled it and the surrounding territory (Judg. 18:27–29). The tribe renamed the city "Dan," and it became a popular designation of the northern extremity of Israel (note the phrase "from Dan to Beersheba" in Judg. 20:1).

19:49, 50 There is no information in the Book of Numbers regarding a special allotment for Joshua, as is done for Caleb (Num. 14:6–9, 24; Josh. 14:6–15). The name of the city given Joshua was Timnath-serah which means "abundant or extra portion." In Judges 2:9 the Septuagint and the KJV call it Timnath-heres which means "portion of the sun" (Judg. 2:9). Ancient tradition says this new name was given to commemorate Joshua's calling on God to make the sun to stand still (Josh. 10:12–14). Others believe that "heres" is a scribal error, "serah" written backwards.

20:2–4 See the note on Deuteronomy 19:1–10, on the "cities of refuge."

22 The LORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he knoweth, and Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD, (save us not this day,)

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt offering or meat offering, or if to offer peace offerings thereon, let the LORD himself require it;

24 And if we have not rather done it for fear ofthis*thing, saying, In*time*to*come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel?

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD: so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar, not for burnt offering, nor for sacrifice:

27 But that it may be a witness between us, and you, and our generations after us, that we might do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace offerings; that your children may not say to our children in*time*to*come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in*time*to*come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

23:12–16 In the last two chapters of the book, Joshua addressed Israel twice. One of the features of this first speech was a stern warning about the consequences of apostasy. Although God intended to drive out the remaining Canaanites (Josh. 13:2–6), He would not do it if Israel was unfaithful to Him. The Book of Judges reveals the tragic story of Israel's infidelity and the consequences that followed.

24:15, 16 This invitation of Joshua is similar to that extended by Moses to Israel on the other side of the Jordan (Deut. 30:15–20). He recognized that one can only serve God in sincerity and truth if he has freely and willingly pledged in his heart to do so. He summarizes the options that are open to Israel: (1) They could return to serve the gods of their ancestors. "On the other side of the flood" would be better translated "on the other side of the river," that is, the river Euphrates (the same meaning is true of vv. 2, 14). "The gods which your fathers served" is a reference to the ones that Terah, Abraham's father worshiped (see v. 2). These were similar to the "images" or "teraphim" which Laban called "his gods" (Gen. 31:19, 30, 34). Perhaps there were some people who secretly worshiped these gods among the children of Israel (see vv. 14–23). (2) They could serve the gods of the Amorites. Although the term "Amorites" referred to a specific people, it was also used in a generic sense for all people living in Canaan. Hence, the reference is made to Baalim and Ashteroth in Judges 10:6. (3) They could follow the example of Joshua and his family, that is, to serve the Lord. This statement of Joshua's stands as one of the greatest affirmations of faith in all the Bible.
